PREFACE

The Register Book for the Fulton County Poor Farm, owned by the Fulton County Historical Society, is approximately 9 x 14-1/4 x 1-1/4 inches. Its first entry is dated December 29, 1871, and its last was recorded on November 20, 1965. There is an index at the front of the book which is not included in this copy, because it is not complete. We have made a complete index which is added to this copy.

The Pictorial Story of America, written by Elia W. PEATTIE and published in Chicago by National Publishing Co. in 1896, includes a section devoted to the history of Fulton County, Indiana. On page 18 of this section, a story of the Poor Farm is told. It reads:

Among the first provisions made by law for the alleviation of the wants of the poor and indigent, was directing the appointment of overseers of the poor, whose duty it was to hear and examine into the nature of all complaints in behalf of the poor, in each civil township of the county, and see that their wants were sufficiently provided for; that such should not suffer for the common necessities of life, nor be ill-treated.

For a number of years after the organization of the county, as was the rule generally adopted throughout the state, the "farming out" system prevailed. A few years later an advance was made, and the county became possessed of a tract of land, since known as the "Poor Farm." The tract of land was purchased by the county board of commissioners in 1871, and in the same year a "poor house" was erected on the farm. It was a frame structure, 16 x 28 feet in dimensions, and one-story high. In 1876, it was supplanted by the present brick structure, which cost, complete, $8,003.58.

Purchase of the land for the "Poor Farm" was published in the Rochester Sentinel, Saturday, June 17, 1871, and records the following information:

. . . . a poor farm has been purchased - The MOORE Farm, lying two miles south of town, exactly in the center of the county, containing 178 acres of choice land, one hundred of it improved, with good substantial buildings, at $50 per acre. The owner agrees to give possession of the farm the first of December, and to leave 400 bushels of corn and ten tons of hay on the place, and put in seventeen acres of wheat this fall, all for $9,000 cash down, and the other $5,000 on taking possession.

Later, on Saturday, Sept. 9, 1871, in the Rochester Sentinel, the following Notice was published:

NOTICE - Proposals will be received at the auditor's office in Rochester, Indiana, until October [14?], 187[?], for the management of the poor farm and keeping the paupers of Fulton county from December 1, 1871, to March 1873. For further information respecting terms, etc. enquire at the auditor's office.

By order of the board of Commissioners

Inspections of the Fulton County Home were made periodically through the years by the State Department of Public Welfare. One of these took place on July 10, 1942, a report of which was released to, and published by the Sentinel on August 6 of that year. It read, in part, as follows:

Fourteen males and five females were present as inmates of this home on date of inspection. Among them, three females were classed by the superintendent as mental cases. One man and two women serve as paid employees, aiding in the general work of the institution.

No important structural changes were noted as having taken place since last previous inspection of July, 1941 . . . These improvements, added to the preceding ones in recent years, make housing quarters for the inmates safer, more sanitary and more cheerful.

Little change has taken place in farm conditions since last inspection. Practically the same acreage as heretofore on this 170 acre farm is devoted to the growing of needed farm crops, vegetables and fruits . . . The sale of surplus products each year from this farm adds to the county general revenue. Two buildings, namely the old garage building and old implement shed appeared to be in need of major changes . . . Dooryards about the plant and farm buildings were again noted as being kept in unusually good condition.

For the purpose of providing safe, clean and sanitary sleeping quarters on second floor of main building and custodial building, attention might well be given to such repairs and equipment installation as would be necessary to make these quarters suitable.

A portion of the food for the three meals per day is prepared in inmate kitchen and the rest is prepared in the residence kitchen . . . Though no meal was served during the inspector's visit, comment among the inmates indicated that the quantity and quality of food served has been satisfactory. Both kitchens were found in clean and sanitary condition and adequately equipped. . .

The superintendent has the authority to call any physician at the county seat in event of illness. Each call is paid for as a separate trip . . . More systematic care of the sick, such as is possible through definite sick ward and practical nurse service, has not as yet become a definite need.

The superintendent reports that there are [religious services] now held every other Sunday. They are sponsored by two Christian Mission workers. The meetings are . . . reported as fairly well attended and appreciated. There appears still to be a need for more concentrated effort and closer cooperation among the church organizations of the county, toward more definite and permanent plans for religious services.

The additional improvements listed above seemed to mark a turning point in the matter of closer cooperative attention to the needs of the institution. With expansion of this cooperative spirit among citizens of the county, with a careful, well balanced administration of the institution and with other physical improvements made as needed, this county home can render a better service to Fulton County.

It is recommended at this time:

That the heating system be made more efficient with installation of steam radiators to replace the antiquated water pipes throughout inmate quarters.

That the outer stairway at the north end of the custodial building be remodeled for strength, safety, and use.

That the old garage building and the implement shed be overhauled and repainted for further farm service.

On January 1, 1966, the County Home portion of the farm was closed, but the sale of the entire piece of real estate - County Home, farm land and farm buildings has made final the official end of an era in our county. The Rochester Sentinel, Friday, January 27, 1967, records the final story of the County Home:

. . . the usefulness of the property to the county dwindled over the years until the institution became a liability instead of an asset. . .

There were 14 persons living at the Home at that time, some 13 years ago. But that represented less than half the number of previous years. And the number continued to decrease until in 1963, there were only eight.

It was in 1963 that the Fulton County Commissioners began to think seriously about the usefulness of the County Home . . . . The County Home was a drain on the county's finances, losing several thousand dollars each year.

In 1963, private patients and those on county welfare paid $60 a month for room and board, a rate set by the County Commissioners. Township relief patients paid $43 a month through the township trustees, an amount set by the state.

The eight patients at the County Home paid a total of $5,556 a year toward a budget of between $22,000 and $25,000 a year.

Augmenting the patient revenue was the County Farm, whose receipts cut the difference between income and budget to about $4,100. The 140-acre farm was devoted to corn, wheat, oats, hay and pasture plus whiteface Herefords and hogs. . . .

The number of patients failed to increase during the next months. In fact, the number had dropped to seven when, in September of 1965, the County Commissioners announced that "after much soul-searching" they had decided to close the institution and sell it at public auction. . . . On Nov. 20, 1965, personal property at the County Home was sold at public auction for $9,670 and on Dec. 31, 1965 the Home was closed, the seven patients having been transferred to nursing homes or other facilities. . . .

Finally, on Dec. 17, 1966, the Commissioners found success on their third attempt to sell the land and buildings. They brought a price of $70,500 from State Senator Robert E. PETERSON of Rochester.

Senator Peterson did not announce his plans for the site, but with the successful completion of the sale, all county connection with the former County Home-County Farm terminated and the end of an era occurred.

And so ends the story of the Futon County Poor Farm. The Register Book records which follow have been carefully copied from the original entries.

17. A LETTER

Shepherd, Mich
June 18, '32

Manager of Fulton Co. Poor Farm
Rochester, Ind.

Dear Sir -

In the last 18 months have you had an old man by name of OSBORN apply for admittance in your institution.

He is 80 yrs old, height 5 ft 2 inches, weight 217 when we last saw him on March 26, 1931. He has white hair and a heavy white mustache. We are in search of him and would like to know of his where abouts. If you have him or have had him will you please let me know.

His name is William OSBORN (Bill) and left our house saying he was going into town for the day & never returned. As Fulton Co. was his old home we have decided he might be in your county Farm.

Will you please let me know if you have him. But if he is there dont tell him I inquired of him please just let me know.

Yours Respectfully

Mrs. W. C. SCHLORFF
