NEWSPAPER

First in Fulton County

The Sentinel, Jan. 3. 1961

As was the case of all frontiers, the newspaperman was not far behind the surveyors when Rochester and Fulton county came into being.

In 1850, barely 15 years after Alex Chamberlain and Lot Bozarth commissioned the future site of Rochester to be laid out in brand-new Fulton county, the first printing press arrived in this city.

It came from Wabash and it was owned by John Q. Howell, later a prominent physician and druggist of Kewanna. Howell set up his press in a Courthouse room which he rented for $18 a year and in December, 1850 he published the first issue of The Rochester Star.

In the ensuing 110 years, there have been no less than 13 other newspapers published for the citizens of this community. All were started with little more than a rickety press and a stick of type. Most of them flared briefly on the local scene and then went to merciful financial deaths.

All contributed their share, however, to the vibrant, sometimes brawling newspaper history of this county seat. Today, The Rochester Sentinel alone survives and The Sentinel proudly assures the heritage of all - for each contributed to its way to the county's progress.

The newspapers of that day were the public's sole means of communication with the distant reaches of this fast-developing nation. Roads were poor and unreliable, so one didn't travel unless he had a serious purpose. The telegraph was becoming more common but its use was not yet fully explored. People had their hands full earning a living, so their newspaper was their primer, their encyclopedia, their almanac, their library and political; exercise and most of all, their link with their state and country.

It was in this era that The Rochester Sentinel was founded.

The Sentinel came upon the scene sometime in October, 1858.

The date cannot accurately be pinpointed because the first issues of the paper are not extant. But the earliest surviving copies (1862) indicate that Volume 1, Number 1 must have come off the press somewhere between Oct. 15-20, 1858.

It is known, however, that The Sentinel grew out of the interest of a group of Rochester citizens in having a newspaper which would express the principles of the Democratic party. All newspapers of that age were blatantly partizan. A century of experience has proved the wisdom of The Sentinel's present policy of being independent of any political party pressure.

Nevertheless, these citizens formed a stock company and issued the first copy of The Rochester Sentinel. The effort proved too great, however, and a year later one Archie McDonald of Logansport took over as editor and publisher, with conspicuous success. He continued until the Civil War broke out, thereupon giving up the pen for the sword.

James Chapin, William Osgood, Isaiah Walker, John Nafe, Carter Hathaway, Al Pugh, Charles Caffyn, Patrick O'Brien, J.C. Loveland, Platt McDonald and A.T. Metcalf were the men who then published The Sentinel for various lengths of time during the next decade. Briefly during this period, the paper's name was changed, once to the Standard and again to The City Times. Then in 1870 McDonald restored title and it has remained evident since.

In 1872, A.T. Bitters purchased the paper and for the next 14 years gave it a solidarity that frequent changes of ownership had seemed likely to shatter. In 1886, Bitters accepted appointment as Rochester postmaster.

In May of that year The Sentinel passed into the hands of the county surveyor, Henry A. Barnhart. By his own admission, this 28-year-old Cass county native had been casting about for a life's work when the opportunity to become a publisher was opened to him.

He searched no more. Henry Barnhart made The Sentinel a potent force in the community's development during 38 years of ownership. He established a daily Sentinel in 1895 and Rochester became one of the few small towns in the state to boast of a six-day a week paper. After 22 active years in the editor's chair, he capped his journalistic and political career with election to the U.S. House of Representatives in 1908. He served continuously until 1919.

Before going to Washington, Henry Barnhart leased The Sentinel to two younger men who had learned the printing and editorial business under him. They were Harold and Floyd (Pete) Van Trump. With Harold (Hurd) in the editorial chair and Pete as superintendent the paper followed a progressive pattern during the next four years. The brothers then decided to go in business for themselves and set up a printing plant on East Eighth Street in 1913 and began publishing The Fulton County Sun.

When the Van Trumps left The Sentinel, the congressman's older son, Dean, resigned his reporter's job on The South Bend News-Times and headed The Sentinel for the next seven years. At the end of World War 1 he moved to Goshen where he assumed publication of The Goshen Democrat. At the same time, Hugh Barnhart, present publisher came here from two years' service in the Army to become publisher and editor. Later he purchased the paper from his father.

Following a party fight, a group of Rochester citizens formed a stock company and in 1922 purchased The Sun, making it a Republican organ. With The Sentinel, Republican and Sun, the community had three daily and two weekly newspapers. But the financial strain was too great and in 1923 the Van Trumps repurchased The Sun. A year later they acquired The Rochester Republican, then owned by Albert Bitters and Marguerite Miller. The new paper was named The Daily News. Now there were two dailies and two weekly newspapers still in existence, as the Sentinel and The News each published both.

Meanwhile Hugh Barnhart had watched closely this unique period in the city's journalistic history. He saw that only a merger would bring one strong newspaper out of impending disaster for all. On Dec. 1, 1924, The Sentinel and The Daily News were consolidated and The News-Sentinel was born. Hugh Barnhart and Floyd Van Trump were owners and co-publishers. The latter died in 1956 and his family interest in the corporation was purchased last September by Jack K. Overmyer, the present editor of this newspaper.

This is The Sentinel's lineage.

There has been but passing mention here of some of Rochester's other newspapers. Besides The Star, this city also has seen issues of The Gazette, The Flag, The Sentinel, The Chronicle, The Union Spy, The Republican, The Independent, The Exponent, The Tribune, The Fulton County Sun, The Daily News and The News-Sentinel = and now The Sentinel again. The list appears to be complete.

The Sentinel's longevity is approached only by The Republican, published just 44 years until absorbed, and by The News-Sentinel, of 36 years' duration.

This city has had its share of erudite and inclusive newspapermen. The names of A.T. Bitters, Henry Barnhart, Major Bitters, A.W. Bitters and Harold Van Trump evoke memories of a day when personal journalism was at the creative peak. Their kind will not come again soon.

But there are other names - of a more recent generation. Hugh Barnhart, Dean Barnhart, Carl Van Trump, Earl Sisson, Marguerite Miller, Earle Miller and Bernard Clayton are of the breed of journalist whose examples still are inspiring others to follow.

Rochester, in fact, has an impressive record of putting its sons into the newspaper profession. The Sentinel hopes to continue to provide that inspiration.

FULTON

The Town Moves Ahead

The Sentinel, Jan. 4. 1961

With four incorporated communities within the boundaries of Fulton county, odds that Fulton would be the fastest growing over the last 10 years would start at four-to-one - yet a bet against that fact would lose.

Fulton boasts 410 persons within its boundaries, according to the 1960 census. The town picked up 44 persons over the 1950 census figure, thus increasing in size by more than 12 percent. It is a trend which well could continue.

As big a source of pride as is the growth factor, however, it is only indicative of a larger one. Residents of Fulton like to point out that within the last 12 months they've made more progress than the town had made in the last 50 years.

The opening of the Fulton Branch Bank of the First National Bank of Rochester is only the latest in a series of events which have given Fulton's citizens every right to be proud.

Also opening recently have been the Midwest Coach Manufacturing company; a laundromat; the Clover Farm super market; two restaurants; a remodeled oil company, a recreation room, a hog purchasing business and other service businesses.

Most amazingly, perhaps, is the fact that Fulton's progress has come about practically spontaneously. In a day when most people's first reaction to any problem is to run to a governmental unit for solutions. Fulton's residents have been able to whip their problems without seeking township, county, state or federal aid.

As a matter of fact, Fulton's tax rate for 1961, one of only three in the county to drop from the 1960 rate of 38 cents, to $5.48 per $100 of assessed valuation. It is the lowest of the county's four incorporated communities and the only one to drop rather than increase.

Fulton likewise has eschewed the services of a Chamber of Commerce or other business-getting organization. Its residents have helped each other in the spirit of Friendliness which always has characterized the town, but they do it individually rather than collectively.

Fulton's main business block is somewhat longer than one would generally associate with a town of 410 persons. It stretches from the Dice Oil company some 400 or 500 yards north of the city limits to the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad on the south, a distance of nearly a mile. Most of the business places are on the west side of the street, but they were built there apparently without thought of grouping them all on the same side of Main.

The corporation is just 60 years old. It was the third Fulton county community to be incorporated - Rochester was the first and Kewanna the second - its citizens presenting a petition to the Board of County Commissioners on March 12, 1900, for incorporation.

An election was conducted April 3, 1900, between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. at F.H. Graham's tin shop on Main street, and 33 qualified voters approved incorporation - as compared to 17 who voted against it. The commissioners thus issued an order on May 7, 1900, incorporating the town.

The town itself goes back to 1850, when a plank road was proposed from Logansport to Rochester. In the course of building the road, a sawmill was built at the location of what is now Fulton because the site was handy to both ends of the road.

Later in the same year, Judge John W. Wright, Logansport, sent a stock of merchandise to the location in charge of Robert Aitken. Aitken took the merchandise in September, watched over it and sold it.

In 1851, Judge Wright and George W. Davis laid out, divided and named the town, but historians of the county regard Aitken as Fulton's first citizen because of his tenure there in 1850.

David C. Buchanan moved in to Fulton in either 1852 or 1853 but moved out again several years after that.

Besides Aitken's duties regarding Judge Wright's merchandise, he also found time to become the town's first postmaster. A post office was built at about the time he arrived with Judge Wright's goods, and Aitken was named to serve as postmaster. He held that office, except for a few months during the 1865-68 administration of President Andrew Johnson until 1881.

Judge Wright, without whom the town might have had a very difficult time getting started, built the town's first school at his own expense.

The first church in town was the home of Robert Calvert, a Methodist Episcopalian. Elder Babcock of the Baptist church conducted the town's first religious services in the sawmill which had been built for the Logansport-Rochester road. These rites were conducted soon after the mill was built.

Liberty township, in which Fulton is centrally located, has historical ties back to 1835. In that year, John Burrows laid out and started working a farm south of what is now Fulton. Other settlers who moved into the township in the same year were Andrew Louderback and Andrew Oliver, both of whom located north of the present site of Fulton, and Silas Lee.

Minor Ally moved into the township in 1838 but moved on again a few years later, and Samuel Collins and Buris Butler both moved into Liberty township in 1840.

Besides the sawmill which was Fulton's first manufacturing venture, and Judge Wright's stock of general merchandise which moved in to become the town's early commercial ventures flourished

John Hazlett built a tannery about 1851, and Benjamin Ziegler built another a year or two later.

In 1856, the ubiquitous Judge Wright established a grist mill, an important piece of machinery to a town in the 19th century. The mill was torn down a number of years later and the machinery therein moved to Rochester, but a steam flouring mill went up in the town in 1873. Frederick Peterson and Theodore White were responsible for the flouring mill..

The town, however, continued to reflect the principal business of the township and to a lesser extent, the county. That business, as it still is today, was farming.

For example, Mr. & Mrs. Charles Meyer, long time Fulton residents, recall that in 1901 the block wherein are located the town's brand new laundromat, Emerson Felder's appliance store, the Rouch drug store, two restaurants and the supermarket, was a garden patch. Mrs. Meyer, the town's librarian, remembers corn growing in that location.

The town continued to grow slowly, along with the township and county, and passed several milestones which contributed to its progress. The railroad at the south edge of town was built in 1902, and A.D. Toner built a grain elevator about the time the railroad was finished.

The block which houses the appliance concern,, drugstore and other businesses was built in 1905. The building where the branch bank has reopened was built in 1914, electric lights were installed in 1915 and the Baptist church built in 1918.

A newspaper, The Fulton Leader, was started in 1900 by D.O. Hoffman. He ran it until 1909, then sold it to J.H. Moore, who died about 1922. Mr. Moore's widow then took over the Republican paper, and various owners ran it until it was suspended Feb. 8, 1945.

The Fulton State Bank was organized Aug. 10, 1907, and the first officers were A.C. Copeland, president; George Rentschler, vice-president, and O.B. Smith, cashier. It and the postoffice formerly were housed in the building which now contains the Carrithers laundromat.

Now the community boasts 38 business and professional services, certainly a high ratio of such concerns in a community of 410 persons. Comprising the current town board are Emerson Felder, Dwight Rouch and Francis Carrithers, while Ralph Ditmire is the board's clerk.

Many of the current concerns have their roots in Fulton's history - but it is one of the town's best talking points that just as many, if not more, have been started and continue to run through the efforts and work of those who have confidence in the town's future, as well as pride in its past.

Together, as any Fultonian will boast at the drop of a compliment, the two make a combination that's hard to beat.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

Soon Will Be 95 Years.

The Sentinel, Jan. 4. 1961

The First National Bank of Rochester, parent bank of the Fulton branch, is one of Fulton county's oldest business institutions.

The First National was founded on July 23, 1866, which means that it soon will observe its 95th anniversary. Such a span of existence has given the bank a reputation of dependability which is well deserved. So, too, is its present day record of keeping pace with the banking times.

Although twice renamed in its long history, the First National Bank's familial descent of ownership has remained intact. Today Mrs. Jane Smith Foellinger carries on this lineage as chairman of the board of directors, after both her father and her husband occupied the president's chair before each was fatally stricken by heart attacks.

The founder of the First National was Arthur C. Copeland, who came to Rochester from Ohio and established the bank as a private institution on the July date in 1866. It then was known as the Rochester bank and it was located in a frame building near where Hubert's Shoe Store is situated.

Six years later - in 1872 - the bank was converted to a national bank through granting of a federal charter and became known as the First National bank for the first time. A.C. Copeland still was president, with his brother, Earl Percy Copeland, as cashier. Not long afterward, however, the bank changed its name back to the Rochester Bank.

About 1887, the bank bought the two-story building where the Seaboard Finance office now operates. It remained there until 1914, when the present building at the northwest corner of Main and Eighth streets was built.

However, President A.C. Copeland, a bachelor, had died in 1905. That same year, the bank took for the last time the title of the First National Bank.

With the passing of A.C. Copeland, his nephew, A.P. Copeland assumed the presidency. The cashier at that time was Omar B. Smith, whose wife, Leila Copeland, was a niece of the founder and a daughter of E.P. Copeland.

Omar Smith became president of the bank in 1916 upon the resignation of A.C. Copeland. He remained at that post for the next 13 years, yielding the job to his son Percy Smith a year before his death. Omar Smith had, in 1910, served as Rochester's first mayor after its incorporation as a city.

Percy Smith, father of the present board chairman, Mrs. Foellinger, headed the First National for 29 years until his sudden death on July 10, 1958.

Robert Foellinger, who had been associated with the bank in various capacities for 12 years previous, succeeded his father-in-law as president. Foellinger died of a heart attack at the age of 41 years on Oct. 31, 1960.

Thus the widows of the First National's last three presidents all have survived them, Mrs. Foellinger serves as board chairman. Her mother, Mrs. Percy Smith, now resides in Indianapolis while her grandmother, Mrs. Omar B. Smith, is 93 years of age and lives in Miami, Fla. The latter's daughter, Mrs. Genevieve Smith LaLiberte Low, also resides at Miami and another granddaughter, Marie LaLiberte, lives in Paris. Mrs. Foellinger has two sons, Robert, 12, and David, 8.

The present First National president is Charles Sheridan, native of Rochester and a member of the bank's staff for 33 years. He was cashier for nine years, executive vice-president three years and vice president two years before his elevation to the presidency. Sheridan's father, the late Michael Sheridan, was the bank's cashier and associated with it 50 years before his death.

Other executive personnel of the bank today are Wildon H. Scholl, vice-president; Ernest Bonine, cashier, and Miss Belva Miller, assistant cashier. Members of the board of directors, besides Mrs. Foellinger, are Sheridan, Bonine, Dr. E.V. Herendeen, O.M. Hendrickson and Harold Groninger, Akron.

The First National has undergone extensive modernization in the past decade, the Fulton branch establishment being the latest in a series of programs begun in 1950 by Percy Smith.

Foellinger, during two years as president before his death, completed extensive exterior and interior remodeling and modern-ization of the bank's facilities. It was Foellinger who also initiated efforts which led to the inauguration of the Fulton branch and he also increased the bank's capitalization to provide additional lending capacity. The First National today not only is one of northern Indiana's oldest banks but also is among its most modern in services. All bookkeeping is done by electronic machines, personal checks being cleared automatically through these diatetic marvels.

Pur James L. Miller

Walter and Florence Smith announced today that they have sold The Sport Spot at Main and Ninth streets to James L. Miller, 1100 Elm street.

Miller will take possession of the sporting goods business Saturday, April 15. His wife, the former Joan Campbell, will be associated with him in the operation of the firm.

Miller, a native of Rochester and a graduate of Rochester high school, is the son of Mrs. Jacob Miller and the late Jacob Miller. He had been employed as an electrician for W;W. Clark Corporation, electrical contractors of Toledo, O., and Pittsburgh, Pa.

Miller formerly worked as a watch repairman at Snyder's

Miller and his wife are the parents of two sons, 11 and 7 years of age.

Although his future plans are indefinite, Smith said that he and his wife will maintain their residence at 1314 Jefferson boulevard. Smith, who purchased the local business in 1954 from Bill Ellis, also will continue as an associate with the Key West Shrimp House in Indianapolis.

FULTON

New Street Lights

The Sentinel, June 7, 1961

The town of Fulton takes another stride in community progress Saturday when its new business district street lights are switched on for the first time.

The 22 new fluorescent fixtures will be put into operation at a special public ceremony Saturday at 9 p.m. in front of the town building. Town officials will throw the switch that activates the lights; the public is urged to attend the brief rites.

Fulton's new lighting system puts it in the forefront of communities in this respect. Each of the 22 new fixtures contains two 10,000 lumen fluorescent bulbs. There are five light standards in each of the four blocks of the business district plus two additional at the north side of the C&O railroad crossing.

The 22 new light fixtures replace five incandescent overhead lights, each using only 6,000 lumens.

The Public Service Company of Indiana's Rochester district has been at work on the installation of the new lights and poles for the last eight weeks. The PSCI owns and maintains the lights.

Cost of the improvement will be $2,325.84 per year, or $105.72 yearly per fixture. Previously, the five incandescent lights had cost the town $34.56 each or $172.80 yearly.

Members of the town board are Dwight Rouch, president; Francis (Hass) Carrithers and Emerson Felder, Clerk-treasurer of the town is Ralph Ditmire.

BAPTIST CHURCH

Dedication of New Bldg

The Sentinel, June 26, 1961

Rochester Baptist dedicated their new church building Sunday as the formal climax in almost four years of planning and construction. Some 440 persons turned out for the morning service, 325 attended the afternoon dedication services and 225 were at a carry-in inner in the new Fellowship Hall at noon.

The Rev. James Niven of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., who was minister at the church from 1918-28 spoke at both the morning and afternoon services. The Rev. James Rhoads, church pastor, presided.

The Youth Choir sang at the morning service under direction of Mrs. Rhoads. Mrs. Charles Long was organist. The Sanctuary Choir sang at the dedication service, also directed by Mrs. Rhoads. Mrs. Everett Kestler was organist.

The board of deacons and deaconesses were hosts at the noon dinner, which was planned to honor members of the building committees which supervised plans, construction and financing of the new church. Richard Misenhimer, chairman of the deacons, and Mrs. Gene Thompson, deaconess, spoke words of thanks at the dinner, as did Walter Eldridge of New Paris, general contractor, and Paul Immel, job superintendent.

The Rev. Harry Bailey of Indianapolis and a former church pastor here, read New Testament scriptures at the dedication service.

The old Baptist building, erected in 1889, now is being torn down to make way for landscaping of the approach to the new church.

HS&M FIRM

Does a Tough One

The Sentinel, July 6, 1961

To preserve the style, to duplicate it in every way, became the assignment of Hart Schaffner & Marx when the Chicago Historical Society asked the firm to duplicate the suit worn by George Washington at his second inauguration on March 4, 1793, the original being the property of the Society.

John W. Meineke, associate designer for Hart Schaffner & Marx, was given this challenging assignment.

Tattered and frayed with age, the historic suit was handled with great care while sketches and the most accurate measurements were made. Every tiny detail was traed through, to the type of hand stitching, the peculiarly handled pockets and the 72 buttons of various sizes which were used on the suit.

Textile manufacturers went to great pains to provide the closest possible duplications of fabrics. With the tiniest snip of velvet from the original suit, it was discovered that this material had been made in France. From the high color selvedge, the firm of William Skinner & Sons was able to trace the silk velvet to a French manufacturer. The original fabrics had been 19-1/2 inches wide. The French firm duplicated it exactly, to the same width and with the same high color selvedge. William Skinner & Sons donated the 11 yards of velvet needed for the work.

Silk was purchased from England to duplicate the original lining. Belgian linen canvas and Irish linen Holland were obtained to reinforce the coat and breeches and to make the pockets.

“Much of the tailoring of the original suit,” said Meineke, “was quite ingenious, but in spots it was rather crude. Underneath the velvet coat flap was a woolen flaop with unfinished edges. The vest back was wool, also with unfinished edges.

The original suit and today’s meticulous copy -together with Mineke’s carfully worked out patterns, are now the property of the Chicago Historcal Society; one a treasure of the country’s beginning, the other a salute to present day research, ingenuity and “know-how.”

Presidents of the United States have quite frequently influenced styles in American men’s wear. Thomas Jefferson is usually credited with the introducton of long trousers as the acceptable dress wear, so replacing the breeches and white stocking of European influence. Very likely this was the first truly American style still vogue to the present day. Hat styles, as set by Theodore Roosevelt and Dwight D. Eisenhower were avidly followed.

FULTON FIRE

Destroys Two Stores

The Sentinel, Aug. 5, 1961

Early-morning flames attacked a two-story, cement block business building in Fulton Sunday, destroying two stores and causing damage to two next-door businesses.

While the ruins still smoldered and erupted at times in small spot fires, Fulton Fire Chief Ralph Mullins this morning estimated damage at well over $40,000.

Housed in the building were the Rouch drug store, owned by George (Bud) Rouch, and the A. and R. Club, owned by Al and Ronnie Gundrum.

Next door to the north, the Knotty Pine Restaurant, owned by Leonard Felts, sustained heavy fire, smoke and water damage.

Across an alley to the south, the Clover Farm grocery store, owned by Ed Drapalik, received serious loss when its north wall was caved in by the whiplash of a chain that snapped or slipped during clean-up operations.

Nick Nevo of Chicago, who owns property in Fulton and was in the town for the week-end, was the first to notice the fire about 3:15 a.m. Sunday. Mullins said his department received the call at 3:18 o'clock.

Rochester, Grass Creek, Kewanna and Lucerne firemen responded quickly to calls for aid.

Fulton's two pumper and a tank truck, Rochester's new pumper, a pumper and a tanker from Lucerne, the same from Grass Creek and Kewanna's tanker soon were stationed in front and back of the flaming building and at Mill creek to the south along the railroad tracks.

Even though the rain-swollen creek provided considerable water, Fulton firemen rapidly decided there was no chance to extinguish the flames that were consuming the business building.

They and the assisting firefighters developed a plan for saving the nearby buildings by preventing the fire from spreading.

"All the trucks arrived with full loads of water and when the tankers had exhausted their supply, they were filled from the creek," Mulln said. A Fulton pumper was at the creek to draw the water and 1,000 feet of 2-1/2 inch hose was laid under the railroad tracks between the ties to the scene of the blaze.

For a time, while a ring of spectators watched the spectacular fire, the safety of Felts was in doubt, since he lived in an apartment above the drug store. Later, it was learned he was not in his residence when the fire erupted.

A fire wall between the one-story Knotty Pines restaurant and the drug store next door south prevented the fire from spreading laterally. But a large section of the business building roof fell to the north on top of the restaurant and broke through.

Firemen had to turn their hoses on the restaurant then, and considerable water and smoke ensued.

About five hours after firemen arrived, the south wall of the business building still was standing, but threatened to topple. Workmen attempted to pull the wall down, but the chain they were using snapped or slipped. It whipped against the grocery store, knocking in part of the north wall and damagng contents of the store. The store had escaped damage until that time.

A pickup truck owned by the General Telephone company, which was parked in back of the A and R club, was charred but could be driven away.

Mullins estimated damage at $10,000 to the business building, $15,000 to the contents of the drug store, $5,000 to the A and R club contents, $6,000 to the grocery store building and contents and $5,000 to the restaurant.

The Rochester fire truck narrowly averted a head-on collision while speeding to the scene on Ind. 25. An oncoming car, with only one headlight burning, headed straight for the truck in the wrong lane. The firetruck managed to swerve to the right to avoid a crash.

Mrs. Bud Braman and Mrs. John Richards, wives of Rochester firemen, brewed coffee at the Rochester station and took it to the firemen at Fulton.

Rochester police and the sheriff's office handled traffic and crowd control at the scene.

BAXTER DRUG STORE

Remodeling & Enlargement

The Sentinel, Oct. 27, 1961

An extensive enlargement and remodeling project is underway at Baxter's drug store, 724 Main street, that when completed will increase the stores sales space by 50 percent.

A new concrete block extension now is being built at the rear to increase the total building length to 140 feet. The addition is 80 feet in length and replaces an old 60-foot extension which was torn down.

An 80-foot long basement also is being dug under the entire building. This will be utilized for storage and equipment.

The building addition is expected to be completed about Dec. 1. Interior remodeling will not begin until sometime in January. The new building will feature two skydomes five by eight feet in size.

A complete interior remodeling is scheduled for the drug store. This will include new lighting, new wall shelving and a complete rearrangement of merchandise for self-selection of goods.

Current plans call for enlargement of the fountain and lunch facilities, as well.

Robert Waltz of Rochester is general contractor for the project, J. Oden Barger doing the plumbing and heating work. Meland and Bowman of Logansport are architects. The remodeling is expected to be complete by early spring.

Baxter's was purchased in 1941 by Ernest Baxter and is operated by Baxter, his wife and their son, Parke. The building has been the site of a drug store for over 70 years.

The Baxters also operate Peoples Pharmacy at the corner of Main and Eighth streets. They plan to close this store when the modernization of Baxter's is complete.

HUBERT'S SHOES

42nd Anniversary Sale

The Sentinel, Nov. 22, 1961

The 42nd anniversary sale of Hubert's Shoes, 706 Main Street, actually marks the Rochester retail service record of the store's owner and general manager, Hubert Taylor.

It was in November 1919, that Taylor entered the shoe business as a clerk in the store operated by his grandfather, Sylvester Alspach, in the room which now is the north side of Camblin's Furniture Store.

This store had the modern-sounding name of the Serve-Yourself Shoe Store. It was, in fact, the second store in Indiana to sell shoes on a serve-yourself basis, being modeled after one in Brazil, Ind.

Hubert has been serving the public at his present location under the name of Brinkman's until 1946, when he changed the title to Hubert's. He is vice-president of Hubert's Shoes Inc., of which Mrs. Judy Brinkman Hodges, Buffalo, N.Y., is president; Mrs. Ray Glass, Rochester, secretary, and John Vernon also of Rochester, treasurer.

Mrs. Glass also has been a regular employee of the store for 19 years, along with Mrs. John Richards, who has worked there for 13 years. Mrs. Ellen Newell is regular part-time help.

Taylor graduated from Rochester high school in 1915 and studied at Wabash college for a year before illness forced him to return home. He worked for his grandfather three years until the Serve Yourself Store was purchased by his uncle, Guy Alspach, and the stock moved to the latter's Hub Shoe Store. Hubert went along in the new venture, joining brother Orbra Taylor in the Hub operation until moving to Brinkman's 14 years later.

Taylor's reminiscences of his early career in the selling of shoes reveals the tremendous strides made in customer service over the intervening years.

Forty years ago, Hubert recalls only one width of shoe was available to a person. Length was determined by measuring a foot with a twig, then sticking the twig into a new shoe. If there was a half-inch clearance or so, the fit was made.

The combination of these two informal, inefficient measuring methods of the early days is the reason many older persons have had difficulties with bunions, Taylor believes.

Today, Hubert's stocks nine different widths of women's shoes, five each in men's and children's.

Taylor remembers that the boots of those days were copper-toed and the soles fastened to the uppers with wooden pegs. They came packed in a grease solution and had to be cleaned thoroughly before put on display.

Gone, too, is the winter habit of men wearing high shoes during the winter. Fred Ruh, local druggist now deceased, was the first Rochester man to keep his oxfords on during the winter, Taylor recalls. "People thought he was endangering his health," said Taylor. Now, of course, such style is common. Mr. & Mrs. Taylor reside at 609 Jefferson street. Their two sons have followed their father into the retail business. John is manager of the Sears Roebuck store in Springfield, O. David is assistant manager of Elkhart's Sears store. Both graduated from Indiana university.

SHORE CLOTHING CO

Pur by Brunt's

The Sentinel, Oct. 5 1962

The sale of the Shore Clothing company at 718 Main street was announced today by Mrs. Reba L. Shore, owner,

The men's wear business, which has been in operation here for 50 years, was purchased by Richard Brunt and R. James Leech of Marion. They presently operate four men's stores under the name of Brunt's, two located in Marion, one in Lebanon and another in Gas City. The new owners have taken possession and closed the store for inventory. They said that their plans for the business would be announced next week.

Mrs. Shore, who resides at 525 Pontiac street, retains ownership of the building.

The Shore men's store was founded here by the late A.B. Shore in 1912. He died last April 22 and his widow has been operating the business since that time.

Removal of the Shore name from the Rochester business district with this sale ends a local merchandising history that goes back to 1833.

It was in that year that Michael Shore emigrated from Virginia to establish a trading post on the newly-built Michigan road (now U.S. 31). His store was built just south of the present Marshall-Fulton county line.

At the time there were but three white families living on the trail between the small trading post of Plymouth and Rochester.

The first Shore in Rochester was Talbert, son of Michael who opened a grocery here about 1861. His son, Perry M. Shore, started a general store and grocery here in 1875 and two years later erected the Shore building in the 500 block of Main street. He continued in business until 1905 when he retired.

A.B. Shore, son of Perry, opened a clothing store in the same block in 1912 and moved into the newly-built structure at 718 Main street in 1922. He was active in the business throughout the ensuing 50 years.

Earl Shore, brother of A.B., took over the operation of his father's grocery and general store in 1905. He now is retired and in ill health. The store was closed several years ago by Earl's successor and son-in-law, Ned Hart.

He and his wife, the former Yvonne Watson of Rochester and three children now are in Montgomery, Ala, while Capt. Sowers attends an Air Force training school.

Sowers' local utility experience spans four companies as well as over four decades. He entered the field Sept 7, 1917 with the Northern Indiana Power company. It was succeeded by the Public Service Company of Indiana. Later, the Indiana Gas and Water company took over the gas phase of utility services and in 1951, the Northern Indiana Public Service Company assumed the gas utility.

Sowers has been local representative for the gas company since 1945. Although most of his experience has been in the service of natural gas for heating and domestic use, he also has been involved at various times in his career with electricity, water and steam heat.

Indiana Gas and Water at one time served the town of Bourbon in Marshall county with water from its Rochester office. Northern Indiana Power company operated steam heating plant from boilers in the northern-most building on Madison street, now used as warehouse by PSCI.

Over 100 customers were provided with steam heating from the central plant, including public buildings, particularly all Main street business houses and some residences. The service was disbanded during World War 11.

In 1945, when the gas utility moved to its present offices, there were 975 customers. Seventeen years later there are over 1,600 and the addition of more gas lines each year keeps edging that number upward.

A native of Chili, Sowers moved here when a fifth-grade student. He attended Rochester high school and several short courses at Purdue university. He has been active in the Kiwanis club, is a charter member of the American Legion and belongs to the Elks lodge.

His only time away from the utility field since 1917 came during World War 1, when he served with a signal corps detachment of the Third Division. Sgt. Sowers was on the front lines along the Marne River front for a year, overseas 18 months. - - - - -

MACY, IND.

Started as Lincoln

The Sentinel, Feb. 20, 1963

(Editor's Note. The following article details the history behind the naming of the town of Macy. It was written by Wayne Guthrie of the Indianapolis News and appeared in his daily column, "Ringside in Hoosierland.")

If the founders of Macy had had their way, that Miami County town would be known as Lincoln today.

That's the way it started and continued for several years.. Then its inhabitants came face to face with circumstances that made a change in name not only advisable but practically necessary.

In June, 1860, George and Anderson Wilkinson laid out the village in 20 lots practically in the center of the county's extreme northwest township - Allen - and named the place Lincoln.

As often is the case, history fails to reveal their reason for picking that name. Could it be they were honoring Abraham Lincoln? Sounds plausible. Although he was not president yet, nevertheless his name was much in the public eye. That was the year he, as the Republican standard bearer, was elected to his first term as president.

All went well for some time. Apparently the founders chose well when they pickd that site because the hamlet grew rapidly. In fact, in 1869 80 lots were added.

Then events that led to the present name began to happen. First, 1869 saw removal to Lincoln of the post office that had had a sporadic existence at Five Corners. It had been established in 1855 and had several discontinuances and revivals.

The post office brought a new problem to Lincoln. There already was a Lincoln post office - established in 1855 - in adjoining Cass County. Think of the mail confusion that would result from two Lincolns in the same state.

Hence the Miami County Lincoln folks adopted for their office the name of Allen, same as their township.

Incidentally, the Cass County Lincoln was laid out in the early 1850s. However, it was not named for Abraham Lincoln but, instead, for Theodore Lincoln, pioneer surveyor who platted that town for its original proprietors, Williamson Wright and Andrew Howard.

Meanwhile the Miami County town of Lincoln retained the name. But, eventually, confusion in shipping and deliveries prompted the folks to seek another. They picked Macy in honor of David Macy, president of the Indianapolis, Peru & Chicago Railroad passing through the village. It now is a branch of the New York Central.

Then, for a time, the post office was known as Allen and the town as Macy. But uniformity came when the post office's name was changed from Allen to May.

Five Corners never was platted. Its name was derived from the fact that roads led out from it in five directions.

One history explains it once gave promise of a bright future but that those anticipations were checked efectively by the coming of the railroad to what is now Macy and the latter's growth.

It also adds that after the postoffice was moved from Five Corners and trade was divered to the railroad town of Lincoln now Macy, about all that soon remained of Five Points was a church and a few dwellings.

Five Corners does not appear on the current state highway map nor that of Miami County contained in an 1876 Indiana atlas. However, both Lincolns - Cass and Miami Counties - appear on the latter map while current maps show Macy and the Cass County Lincoln.

MORRIS GROCERY

Closing Out

The Sentinel, April 19, 1963

Morris Grocery, the last of Rochester's small downtown food stores, is going out of business - the victim of supermarket competition and the changed buying habits of the public.

Don King, owner of the grocery, said this morning that he intends to have the closing-out sale completed by May 30.

The move apparently brings to an end almost 100 years' occupancy of the 723 Main street site by a grocery store. The firm's present name stems from a former owner, the late Arley Morris. He operated the business for 37 years until his death in 1955. King succeeded to ownership at that time, having been with the business from 1948.

Prior to Morris, others had operated a grocery in the same location, among them Charles Kilmer, P.D. Bennett and Kline Shore.

King had been employed at Wynn's Grocery, now Day's Food Market, for 10 years before joining the Morris firm. He said that he has no immediate plans. Don O'Dell, meat manager, will begin work Monday in the meat department at Owen's Supermarket. Other store employees are Bill and Cora King and Erma O'Dell.

King said that the store has been unable to compete in the food price market here and that its lack of parking facilities and its limited merchandise, "has made our type of small downtown store obsolete."

FULTON CO HIST SOC

Established Tuesday

The Sentinel, May 1, 1963

The Fulton County Historical Society was an established fact today, following a meeting Tuesday night in the Edison room attended by 31 persons.

At that meeting, a constitution for the Society was adopted, 22 persons paid $2 yearly dues as the Society's first charter members and four officers were elected to conduct Society activities.

It is the first such historical group to be formed here on a county-wide basis.

Elected president was Jack K. Overmyer, editor and publisher of The Sentinel, vice-president was Waldo Adams, Rochester high school teacher; secretary is Mrs. Shirley Holmes, high school teacher, and treasurer is Theodore Lewis of Akron, distributor of paint products.

Tuesday's meeting was conducted by members of an executive committee that was formed a month ago to plan an orderly organization of the Society. Members of that committee were Overmyer, chairman, Mrs. Lamoin Hand, secretary, Adams, Mrs. Ray Engle, Mrs. Elmer Overmyer, Mrs. Holmes, Lewis, Robert Kent and Mrs. Barbara Allen.

According to the constitution Tuesday, the Society's purposes are "to collect and preserve the materials of our county's history, to secure and document the recollections of those having taken part in the growth of the county, to see that public records and archival materials are properly cared for, to mark historical sites within the county, to receive bequests to further the work of the Society, and to kindle interest and foster pride in the historic achievements in Fulton county.

The Constitution also opens Society membership to anyone interested, sets dues at $2 per year payable in advance each May 1, forbids assessment of members without majority approval and provides for annual meeting with election of officers each April. Committees for Society projects are to be appointed by the president.

Each person at the meeting was asked to denote the particular area of local history in which he is interested. Officers plan to place each member on a committee of personal interest.

Society officers are expected soon to appoint committees for Society projects and to plan for the Society's first general meeting, which are to be held on a quarterly basis.

The officers will have as a guide the recommendations for projects presented Tuesday by the executive committee. The following committees were suggested as being feasible for the Society's first months of activity.

Indian life and artifacts, with location of important sites and display of collections; old mills, resulting in display of location map; documents and old pictures, with collection for public use; Civil War, documenting county's part in the conflict; historical sites, with placing of markers throughout county; tape recording, obtaining personal reminiscences of older residents on magnetic tape for future use by historians; education, with distribution of local historical subjects to county school children; genealogy, researching old cemetery markers; antiques, for receipt of valuable items; publications and research.

The committee recommended that no deadlines be placed upon the work of the committees and that each report its results to Society officers, who would determine means of public use of the data.

Ultimate aim of the society was set as establishment of a county historical museum. It was recommended, however, that this project not be started until the Society was strong enough to make such a museum practical and permanent.

Charter memberships still are available at the $2 annual fee.

DON'S SHOE CARE

Opened by Bennett

The Sentinel, May 2, 1963

Donald Bennett, Rochester's newest businessman, is making his first start in the world of "own your own business" with his Don's Shoe Care shop at 113 East Seventh street.

The 33-year-old native of near Atwood opened his shoe repair business last week in the quarters formerly occupied by Foley's jewelers.

Sewing machine repair, scissors sharpening and sale of shoe polish, shoe laces and related items also are parts of Bennett's business services.

Formerly a salesman for Smith-Alsop paints, Bennett lives southwest of Warsaw in Kosciusko county with his wife, Carolyn, and four children - Stephen, 12; Michael, 9; Don, 2-1/2; and Ellen Star, 1. They plan to move to Rochester soon.

Green Belt Chem Co

East of Fulton

The Sentinel, May 7, 1963

Ground has been broken for a new chemical fertilizer manufacturing plant on a 4-1/2 acre site a half-mile east of Fulton, along the west side of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad tracks.

The Green Belt Chemical Co, with headquarters in St. Paris, O., is constructing the plant, with expectations of opening it this fall.

It will employ about eight men during normal production periods and up to 15 in the peak months of March, April and May. Most of the employees will be hired locally.

A 140 by 114-foot steel and wood building for manufacturing and storage will be constructed at the south edge of the site, close to a C&O spur line that is to be extended to the plant. Three big storage tanks for liquid ammonia and nitrogen will be installed, also.

Green Belt now has plants at St. Paris, Kenton, New Bremen and South Solon, O., and at Bryant, Fairmount and Lynn, Ind.

The plant will manufacture ammoniated fertilizer from liquid nitrogen, phosphate and potash. The potash will be delivered on the spur line from Canada and New Mexico and the nitrogen solution and sulphuric acid from various points.

Retail sales will be handled from the plant by two salesmen within a radius of some 40 miles of the site. Sales will be in both bulk and bag with nitrogen applicators and bulk spreaders available, too.

William Leonhard, who has been a sales representative in this area for chemical fertilizer firms for some 10 years, will be in charge of Green Belt's Fulton plant. He has been with Green Belt 3-1/2 years.

Now a resident of Portland, Ind., Leonhard expects to move soon to the Fulton area with his wife, Martha, and 18-year-old daughter, Shirley.

He said the foundation for the manufacturing and storage building will be laid shortly and that the structure itself will begin to take shape next month.

Leonhard is working with Bob Leavell, owner of the Fulton Mill, who has been a dealer and has provided warehouse facilities for Green Belt for three years. Bob's brother, Howard, also is a dealer for the firm at Tiosa.

STATEMENTS BY THE OWNERS

After 81 years this store is quitting business forever due to the recent illness of the present owners, we cannot carry on.

Of course, we could have sold our store to a stock buyer, but he would bring in a lot of inferior goods and sell it as ours. We would have none of that, we are going to sell-out direct to the public. The people made this store and are entitled to its benefits.

We ask all our friends and customers to come in and buy all you need - - - and buy with confidence.

BOOKMOBILE

City-County Library

The Sentinel, May 9, 1963

The gray Bookmobile with brightly colored trim that operates as part of the Rochester-Fulton county library, is seen on many a country road 11 months of the year. Mrs. Ann Zartman and Mrs. Betty Ewen make up the Bookmobile staff.

Following a prearranged schedule the Bookmobile makes one stop every four weeks at schools at Talma, Richland Center, North Caston, and Aubbeenaubbee Township stops for the adult patrons are made at the Aubbeenaubbee school building and the DeLong store in Aubbeenaubbee township; at the D.T. Rose farm and the Tiosa store in Richland township, and at the Grass Creek EUB church in Wayne township. Liberty township is served by the Fulton branch library.

This summer, however, a stop will be added at Nyona Lake. Much interest in Bookmobile service has been shown by people in that area. If this proves successful during the summer months, the Bookmobile will continue Nyona Lake service during the winter for the adult readers.

The Bookmobile staff works from a room in the basement of the main library. Here is kept the Bookmobile's own supply of books, duplicates of many in the library collection. Keeping in mind the interests and needs of the patrons to be reached each run, the staff stocks the Bookmobile from the county collection.

Any book housed in the main library is available to the Bookmobile patron, as are the resources of the State Library in Indianapolis. The Bookmobile staff will deliver the desired book on the next scheduled stop.

Individual attention is given to those patrons who request it. Depending on their knowledge of an individual's reading interest, selections are made from the Bookmobile collection by the staff and delivered to the patron at a scheduled stop.

Each registered patron of the Bookmobile receives a printed schedule of Bookmobile stops through the mail each September. The schedule is changed again in January and June and the patrons are again given a printed schedule showing these changes. Schedules are published each week in The Sentinel, also.

The four county schools are serviced by the Bookmobile once every four weeks. Given reading lists submitted by English teachers at each school, the staff then fills out the supply to take to each particular school. In addition to these books for required reading, the Bookmobile also is stocked with all types of books for supplemental reading by the students.

Another service offered students is that of furnishing reference material. The student places a request for information for the preparation of term papers and reports on specific subjects; the staff finds the books in the county collection with the necessary information, and returns them to the student the next month.

The Bookmobile does not operate during August. This time is spent by the staff in the county room of the main library to mend the books and sort the collection. Also, the time is needed for repairs to the Bookmobile. Preparations are made for the new school year since school material is not carried on the Bookmobile during the summer months.

The Library hopes to increase service offered to the county by the Bookmobile; the staff is anxious to promote service to the adult reader. Anyone in the county who would like Bookmobile service and can get enough other people interested in their community should let this interest be known to the Bookmobile staff.

OVERMYER STORE

Closing Down

The Sentinel, May 13, 1963

One of the last general stores in Fulton county, the Overmyer store in Leiters Ford, will be closed at the end of a going-out-of-business sale that began today, owner Paul (Red) Davidson announced.

Leiters Ford landmark for 65 years, the store was opened by Dr. and Mrs. B.F. Overmyer, pioneer residents of the Aubbeenaubbee township community, in 1898.

Davidson, a nephew of the Overmyers, became a partner in the business in 1946 and sole owner in 1954.

In April of 1961, Davidson was appointed acting postmaster of Leiters Ford and his wife, Rosemary, operated the store. Recently, Davidson was nominated by President Kennedy as permanent postmaster.

Davidson said his duties in the Post Office, requiring him to be absent from the store, prompted the decision to close the store.

He said the store's quarters 40 by 90 feet, will be for rent or lease.

The Si Zentner orchestra, newest of the "big name" bands and one of the most successful in the record-selling business, will play a one-night stand at the Colonial hotel ballroom Friday, June 7, from 8 p.m., to midnight.

The dance is being unerwritten by interested local men and the Chamber of Commerce as a benefit for the Rochester high school band. Proceeds of the dance above expenses will go to the RHS band fund.

Zentner was chosen as the top recording band of the nation the past two years and the group also won the "Grammy Award" for big-band excellence in 1962.

The band played last week for the Tech high school prom in Indianapolis.

L.F. LBR YARD

Bldg Torn Down

The Sentinel, June 7, 1963

Willis Cripe, owner of the Leiters Ford Elevator and Lumber yard, announced that he will tear down the old lumber yard building Saturday.

Cripe said that the 200-by-200 foot frame building would be bulldozed down and then burned. This is being done to enlarge the company's service area.

The company moved to its new location - the north side of the Erie-Lackawanna railroad tracks - last year. The old yard was on the south side of the tracks.

The old building is no longer needed and is beyond repair, Cripe said.

Aubb Twp Strawberry Fest.

10th Annual

The Sentinel, June 18, 1963

Spacemen may orbit, racial strife may explode and taxes may be constitutional or not, but once a year at Leiters Ford, all thoughts turn to just one big event - the Aubbeenaubbee Township Strawberry Festival.

That's when a normally quiet and sedate community of several hundred residents suddenly burgeons into a mecca for thousands of persons looking for - and finding - fun, food, entertainment, fellowship and strawberries in every size and shape imaginable.

This year's Strawberry Festival - the 10th annual - will be Thursday and officials quite frankly are wondering just how many persons will show up at the school athletic field where the Festival takes place.

They were flabbergasted two years ago when 3,500 men, women and children attended. They were astounded last year at the turnout of 4,500.

The Festival will begin officially at 5 p.m. when the food stands open, geared to serve quickly and efficiently as many persons as take advantage of this portion of the event. They'll stay open as long as the plentiful supply of food lasts.

Games and rides also will go into operation at 5 o'clock at the field and will hold forth until the close of the Festival.

The Festival parade is the biggest annual event of its kind in Fulton county. It will begin at 7:30 p.m. and will include at least 20 units. It will be both fun and profitable for four of the participants, for prizes of $50, $25, $15 and $10 for first through fourth place floats will be awarded.

The parade will form at the Leiters Ford Methodist church west of the town and meander through the community to the athletic field.

The formal program will begin shortly after the parade has reached the field - probably about 8:30 p.m. - and will include entertainment, awarding of prizes and crowning of the 1963 Queen.

Eight Aubbeenaubbee township girls have been campaigning for enough one-cent votes to qualify as successor to Melinda Jones, the 1962 Queen. The candidates are Barbara Hunneshagen, Christine Nelson, Ursula Szponar, Judy Roe, Nancy Crill, Dani Masters, Jeanie Cripe and Sandy Bubp.

An added highlight in the crowning of the Queen will be the appearance of Julia Jane Flanigan of Lebanon, "Miss Indiana" of 1962. She will present the crown to the Festival's new Queen.

Also participating in the program will be the Manitous and the pep band from Rochester high school; two numbers by students of the Pamela and Louise dance studio of Rochester; the Outlanders, a musical combo composed of Aubbee and Kewanna youth; Cindy Teel, Rochester, and Carol Overmyer, Culver, vocal solos; Randy Brugh, Rochester, trumpet solo, and the Argos drill team.

James Zimmerman of Rochester will be master of ceremonies.

Another feature of the Festival will be square dancing in the calling and music of Dewey Anderson of Knox in the school gymnasium. Dancing will begin about 9 p.m.

The Fulton County Amateur Radio club will have a booth at the Festival at which persons can send messages to any spot in the U.S. and its possession free of charge. The public also will be able to hear and see the messages being handled.

The purpose of the Festival is two-fold: To raise funds for equipping the Aubbeenaubbee township volunteer fire department and to unite residents of the township in a common activity. Both purposes have been fulfilled in each of the previous nine Festivals.

This year, officials hope to accumulate enough money to purchase an ambulance for the fire department. Emergency equipment, such as a resuscitator, has been purchased in the past. Firemen also hope to be able to buy a portable water pump for use on grass fires.

1913 FLOOD

Wabash River

The Sentinel, June 18, 1963

Editor's Note: Floyd (Jack) Mattice was a young man who lived at Lake Manitou in 1913 when the great flood smashed into Peru. He played a leading part in the rescue of hundreds of Peruvians by Rochester residents. He now resides at 1101 Madison street. Here is another in The Sentinel's series of first-hand accounts of the flood that happened 50 years ago.

BY FLOYD (JACK) MATTICE

The Wabash river was over its banks at Wabash, Peru and Logansport in March, 1913. The mayor of Peru called Omar B. Smith, Mayor of Rochester, asking for boats and men to handle them. The mayor put me in charge.

All of Rochester's drays were pressed into service and a couple boxcar loads of row boats were hauled in from the lake. Men were recruited to man them. Charles Knight, et al.

I decided to take my canoe, figuring a canoe could be better handled in the swift current. Not having time to secure an experienced canoist, I met up with Maurice C. Shelton, of the Progress Wholesale grocery. Maurice had never been in a canoe before, but he paddled. I coached him on what things not to do and we got along fine.

The Lake Erie pushed the cars containing the boats down through Hiner's cut and to the water's edge near the then Peru Canning company plant. Our orders were to report to the sheriff of Miami county at the courthouse, who deputized each of us as deputy sheriffs. It said so right on a shipping tag tied into our coat lapels.

In East Peru that afternoon and night water was up to the porch roofs and the residents were in the second stories of their homes. Forty of 50 people were taken out of second story windows and transported to the courthouse before dark.

By that time most of the row boats, also the motor launch from Winona Lake, were swamped and out of commission. Whenever any craft came broadside against a pole or building, the upstairs side went down, and water poured in over that side.

Maurice and I continued all that night, bringing people from their homes to the court house. Coming in Sixth street, or whatever street it was with a street car line, the water was up to within about three feet of the trolley wire and supporting cables. We became expert in ducking in under those wires.

Though it was dark, lights in various houses shining out across the water enabled us to make our way.

By daybreak the next day, orders were not to bring any more people to the courthouse. By that time the county building was a mess. Sewers were stopped up, there was no water available for any purpose, and the officials feared an outbreak of disease.

A merchant policeman who lived in a brick house next door to the Wallace theatre hailed us that morning and asked if we were hungry. That we were, and we landed in his kitchen. His lower floor was above water, he had a fire in his kitchen stove, had a water well and a goodly supply of food.

Maurice and I enjoyed ham and eggs. etc., then acquiring two large milk cans, filled them with water from this officer's well and began touring the city, dishing out about a gallon of water to each family. Hardly anyone could reach his pump and all were very thirsty. We spent most all day delivering water.

Then we had a happy thought. Across the street from the courthouse was the Mercer bakery. Paddling down the alley, we found the double back doors of the bake shop unlocked. Pushing them open, we paddled inside and, making a number of trips, we hauled cases of eggs, big boxes of bread, gallons of milk, pounds of butter, plus pies and cakes to the courthouse.

There was a gas plate in the basement and soon, those residing there were having eggs, toast and coffee.

Many times during that first afternoon we passed along the side of Ben Wallace's home. We saw him pacing up and down on his porch. The next day while we were hauling drinking water, Mr. Wallace hailed us. We paddled over his iron fence and up alongside his porch.

He said, "I see you can make headway against the current and go most everywhere in your canoe. I am worried about conditions up at the winter quarters. No telephone, no word from there. I see you are busy but, if and when you have time, wonder if you would go up and bring me some word."

Later in the day we did go up to the circus winter quarters, found everything in good shape and so reported to Mr. Wallace.

Ben Wallace had a nephew, Bernie, who sold tickets in the ticket wagon of the circus. He had the reputation of being the world's fastest ticket seller. The water in the street in front of the courthouse was only about two feet deep and there, right smack in the middle of the street, stood Bernie's stripped down sports car, but no sign of the owner.

One lesson learned at Peru that time was that row boats are not of much use when there is a strong current and the men found it most difficult to row up stream against the current.

In our canoe we had no difficulty with the current. If it was a bit strong, we would get over between the trees and fence lines where the current was not so swift. A row boat could not be operated there because there was not sufficient room to swing the oars.

A canoe, in swift or in still water, can go places where a row boat cannot.

PERU THANKS ROCH

For Help During Flood

The Sentinel, June 19, 1963

Editor's Note: In his second article about activities related to the great Peru Flood of 1913, Hugh A. Barnhart of Lake Manitou, former editor and publisher of The Rochester Sentinel, gives a first-hand account of "Peru Day" in Rochester. Mr. Barnhart now is president of The Sentinel Corporation.

BY HUGH A. BARNHART

The disastrous flood at Peru on March 24-28, 1913, had faded into the background by the following spring but not in the minds of those persons in Peru who had been rescued, taken into Rochester homes, or fed and cared for while trapped in their own houses.

The Peru Newspapers, when they resumed publication, were loud in their praise of the untiring efforts of Rochester citizens for their organization and efficiency in doing more than was expected of human beings.

The Peru press gave the lion's share of the credit for saving lives to Rochester men and women. They carried stories about how more than two freight cars, loaded with food, water, provisions, blankets and medical supplies sent from here were received by the stricken city. More than 60 boats from Lake Manitou, including launches, row boats and canoes, all manned by local men, did heroic work for four days up and down the flooded streets. Charles and "Tid" Knight, the only men to row across the Wabash river during the crest of the flood, were recommended for Carnegie medals for heroism.

Yes, Rochester citizenry stood high in the hearts and minds of their neighboring population. And this change took place followed half a century of ill feeling between the two cities.

No, all this was not forgotten by the people along the Wabash and from them came a suggestion that Rochester hold a "Peru Day" so they could come here and express their appreciation in person.

A committee of Peru's leading citizens came to Rochester early in the month and after a lengthy meeting with Rochester officials and businessmen, the day was set for June 17. The program was worked out and an announcement followed that the "Wedding of the Two Cities" would take place with a big celebration. It occurred 50 years ago Monday. The committees were appointed whose members estimated there might be 8,000 or 10,000 people in town for the big celebration. When the last event was over it was agreed by those in charge that Rochester entertained over 20,000 visitors throughout the day and night.

Those who did not bring their own picnic lunches were fed in the churches, restaurants, hotels and at Lake Manitou eating places.

The Sentinel and the Republican, in reporting the events, pointed with pride to the fact that no accidents were reported; there were two cases of heat prostration and only two arrests. It also was mentioned there were numerous fights but it was stated these all occurred among visitors.

The crowd began pouring into town early, coming by horse and buggy, wagons, bicycles, automobiles and on foot. When the first of five special trains arrived from Peru over the Lake Erie & Western RR they found the town already crowded. A Peru automobile caravan that ended up with more than 300 cars came by way of Mexico, Denver, Perrysburg and Deedsville, picking up additional auto loads from Macy, Wagoners Station and Green Oak on the way.

By actual count, the trains brought 6,000 Peru citizens while no count could be obtained of those finding other means of transportation.

People were here also from South Bend, Warsaw, Plymouth, Huntington, Kokomo, Akron, Kewanna, Fulton and all county communities.

At 10 a.m. more than 300 automobiles formed a parade up and down Main street, which was gaily decorated for the big occasion. Motion pictures were taken of this colorful spectacle and all events following. This was the start of a big all-day program.

The main parade of the day, general in character, started at 11 o'clock. The marchers, most of them on foot, assembled in four divisions on streets east of Main. The grand marshalls were Hugh McCaffrey, Peru, and Jack Chamberlain, Rochester.

Six bands played lively marching tunes for the walkers. The organizations were: Third Regiment band, Peru; Citizens band, Rochester; Manitou band, Rochester; Brown Commercial Car band, Peru; Akron band; J. Ross Woodrings Renowned Gazook band. The newspapers all praised the Gazooks, with their unusual bright costumes, their hot-time music and their marching formations. There were more than 1,000 persons in the parade.

All officials of both cities and counties were prominent in the parade, as were visiting dignitaries. Floats were numerous while many Peru citizens carried signs expressing appreciation for the help given them during the flood. A boy held high a large Hatchet, uniquely painted and decorated with ribbons, plus a sign which read "This is The Hatchet We Bury Today."

The gigantic crowd next gathered around a stand in the Courthouse yard to hear Mayor Omar B. Smith welcome all the visitors here for the celebration. He ended by presenting the keys of the city to Mayor Kreutzer of Peru and it was gallantly accepted. The Rev. Harry Nyce made the main address of the day and spoke at some length covering the events of the flood and thanking the people who helped them through the disaster. Other officials spoke briefly. The orators had difficulty being heard above the din (loud speaker systems had not been dreamed of in 1913).

Visitors and local persons alike then began to look skyward for the big thrill of the day. At 2:10 p.m. aviator Beech took his bi-plane aloft from a field east of the city (where Manitou Heights is now located).

The newspapers stated he circled the field five times but left the great majority of people greatly disappointed in that he did not fly over the city as advertised. Later, his manager explained that he forbade the city flight as there would be no landing place for the plane if something went wrong while it was over the buildings.

However, all ended well. By 4 p.m., the air was perfectly still and Beech proceeded to pilot his plane over the center of town and finished his flight by a daredevil circle of the Courthouse tower.

Sometime during the afternoon, and it escaped general attention but I saw it; delegations from Rochester and Peru gathered on the Courthouse lawn bearing the big hatchet. With due ceremony and appropriate words, a hole was dug and the hatchet was buried - with the handle sticking out of the ground.

The long program came to an official end with a gigantic and spectacular fireworks display put on by a Chicago firm. It started off with a flaming message going aloft reading "Welcome Peru." Other numbers featured the flood and praised the rescuers. It was a fitting finish to a day of good fellowship and one which cemented a friendly spirit between peoples that has not changed.

Throughout the day, visitors flocked to Lake Manitou and the roads were jammed with hacks, autos, buggies and pedestrians.

It was claimed that over 8,000 persons were on shore and on the waters. Every row boat was rented and in use all day and far into the night, many occupied by persons who knew little about handling them. As a result, the gasoline launcher which plied the lake with sightseers had considerable difficulty getting about without running down amateur boatmen. (Outboard motors and speed boats were yet to be developed) The hotels and eating places were jammed and most of them ended the, "eaten out of house and home."

The newspaper recorded that several people fell into the lake during the afternoon. At one place, two men and two women shoved off with all of them in the back end of the rowboat. They became panic stricken and one man jumped out and found he could not swim. Tom Hoover was standing on shore when this happened. He jumped into the lake and pulled the man out. Meanwhile, a woman had fallen in and gone down once. Hoover swam out, caught her by her waist and brought her in.

At another landing a woman, weighing 250 pounds, missed the launch on stepping off the pier. It took four men to haul her out of six feet of water.

Yes, it was a big occasion and not half the story has been told. It was a day of fun and celebration and everyone made the most of the occasion. It was a day long to be remembered.

RNU

34th Reun Set

The Sentinel, July 8, 1963

Alumni of the former Rochester Normal university and Rochester college will meet for their 34th annual reunion Sunday, July 14, at 12:30 p.m. in the clubhouse of the Fulton County Conservation club on the Tippecanoe river, three miles northwest of Rochester.

The college operated in Rochester for 17 years, from 1895 to 1912. Any person who ever attended the institution is welcome to the reunion. Reservations should be called to Dow Haimbaugh, president of the RNU Alumni Association or Mrs. Arthur Shore, secretary-treasurer.

Rochester Normal was founded in 1895 by Professor W.H. Banta and Professor George Suman. The school was made possible through the efforts of Dr. W.S. Shafer of Rochester, who bought a plot of ground in southeast Rochester from Horace Mackey. He divided the ground into lots, sold them to local residents and thus financed construction of the building housing the college.

The structure was three stories of brick and stone with basement. On the first floor was a chapel, library, office and one recitation room. On the second floor were four recitation rooms and on the top floor was the business department and science room.

The school first was known as Rochester Normal university and then became known as Rochester college. At the beginning it was a small affair of only five teachers and a handful of pupils. It grew rapidly, however, until it became an accredited high school and later a college known in every state. Its credits were accepted wherever presented by graduates.

Most of the teachers were graduates of the University of Chicago and among the best then in the profession.

The college building was located at the south end of College avenue, at 18th street. Near the school was a medium-sized house used as a home for students.

Most of the pupils boarded in Rochester and paid the enormous sum of $2.50 per week for room and meals. Some students boarded themselves for much less.

At one time the college had 200 paying students. Prospects for the future seemed bright until the building of the new Rochester city and township high school. This eliminated support of the college by township funds, so the college had to close its doors in the summer of 1912. The building later was dismantled.

Records of all college students, along with their grades, can be found at the Rochester library for the years 1899-1912.

The college offered high school work, teaching courses, college studies, special instruction in speech, Latin, science, German, mathematics, literature or philosophy; lessons in instrumental or vocal music and business courses.

ROCH TEL CO

Mary Gould Inman

The Sentinel, August 6, 1963

BY HORTENSE MYERS

United Press International

When Mary Gould Inman went to work 56 years ago for the Rochester Telephone Company, the chief operator had been employed by the utility 13 years.

“I said then that I’d never be here that long,” Mrs. Inman laughed. “Belle Bernetha, the chief operator, went on to stay for 44 yrs, and now I am retiring after 56 years.”

The 56th anniversary date comes Aug. 17 and her formal retirement, Aug. 31. Then Mrs. Inman will begin a new career as a housewife. She was married about four months ago to John Inman, Rochester barber.

“I suppose I will get one of those Kennedy rocking chairs and take it easy,” Mrs. Inman predicted of her coming retirement, but in the next breath said “I couldn’t stand taking it easy for long. It would get tiresome.”

Mrs. Inman is a native of Rochester and has watched it and the telephone industry grow during the more than half a century she has had her finger on the city’s communications pulse.

The day she went to work the utility had only four operators who used a magneto-type board in an upstairs room over the Dawson drug store, now Lords. Today, there are some 25 operators and the company occupies a sizeable building at 117 West Seventh street.

During the years she has served in several capacities with the company but the job of personal bill collecting is one she hasn’t had for some time.

Part of her job in the early years was to go to the homes of telephone customers and collect door-to-door because that was the casual way things were done.

I pedaled a bicycle on my collection rounds,” she recalled.

Her beginning salary was $2.50 a week.

“There are times when I think $2.50 goes further than than my present pay,” Mrs. Inman commented. “There wasn’t very much to pay out then.”

Mrs. Inman and her new husband are longtime friends so she does not anticipate too many adjustments in her new career as a homemaker.

“I’ve had a house of my own for a long time and do my own cooking” she explained. “I won’t say I am a very good cook, but at least I won’t need to take lessons.”

WRIGHT REUN

Melita Snyder Res

The Sentinel, August 23, 1963

The descendants of James Wright, pre-Civil War settler in Fulton County, gathered for a family reunion Sunday at the home of Mrs. Melita Snyder in Rochester.

James Wright was born in Eaton county, O., in 1815 and had 12 brothers and sisters. His father, Samuel Wright, came to America from Belfast, North Ireland, in 1780, having been loaned $200 by his brother Robert, who remained in the old country. Samuel met and married Jane Taylor in New York state and later the couple moved to Preble county, O., where they prospered as farmers and raised a large family.

On their beautiful farm homestead in the rolling hills of Preble county, James spent a happy boyhood along with his sisters, Sarah, Tabitha (Tabby), Jane and his brothers, John, Robert, Assenath and others.

About the year 1836, James moved to Fulton county where he married Margaret Reid, a member of an illustrious New England family who also followed the trek to the land of the Tippecanoe, Eel and Wabash after the defeat of the Indian Confederacy at Fallen Timbers. Members of the Reid family fought in the Revolution.

James Wright established his farm on land he purchased near Rochester, aided by his inheritance from the estate at Eaton, probated in the year 1867. This lovely farm and neat little farmhouse is now owned by his great-granddaughter, Melita.

To James and Margaret were born three children, Jane, Samuel and William. William died as a youth. Jane married George Perschbacher, also of Fulton county. Her brother, Dr. Sam, married Harriett Cool, daughter of the famous Baptist missionary to the Miami Indians. The Rev. Wm. Cool and Mariah Warner Cool.

The grandchildren and great-grandchildren of Jane and Samuel, all cousins, joined in a grand reunion at the home of Melita Snyder, member of the DAR and a teacher in the third grade in Argos.

Present were the following: Mrs. Melita Snyder and son and daughter-in-law, Mr. & Mrs. George Snyder and children, Mr. & Mrs. Miles Perschbacher and son Stephen, Plymouth; Dr. & Mrs. Dow Haimbaugh, Rochester; Mr. & Mrs. Stephen E. Wright, Collinsville, Ill., Mrs Fred Wright. Collinsville, Ill.; Mr. & Mrs. Harold Haskett, Elmhurst, Ill.; Mr. & Mrs. Robert Kesler and daughter, Rochester; Mr. & Mrs. Robert Wright, Bedford, O.; Mr. & Mrs. Ernest Bonine and daughter, Rochester; Mrs. Edna Carey, Mrs. Harriet Bonine, Mr. & Mrs. Mahlon Bair, Rochester; Mr. & Mrs. Fred Hartman, Warsaw.

The assemblage was addressed by Dr. Haimbaugh, who told of boyhood experiences including one where Fred Wright, who spent many a pleasant summer day at Haimbaugh and Perschbacher farms, tied srings to turtles in the farm pond, while the grownups were attending church. On returning home the family was amaze to see small boats being towed around the pond by the submerged turtlss.

A short history of the Wright family was given by Steve Wright. Plans were made to repeat the reunion in 1964 and make it known to numerous relatives who did not learn of it in time to arrange attendance this year. Tentative date has been set for the third week in August, 1964, in Rochester.

CRYSTAL DAIRY

Now Bulk Operation

The Sentinel, August 31, 1963

The double-handled milk cans that are a trademark on so many dairy farms may be relegated to being containers for mail box posts and potted plants in Fulton county because of a new operation by a local cheese producing plant.

The Crystal Dairy Products plant in Rochester has become the first Indiana manufacturer of cheese products to switch from canned to bulk Grade B milk and the operation appears to be successful.

William Wisley, former Crystal plant manager and now head of Crystal's Forest Farms Products division here, said about 125 of the 600 farmers now selling milk to the local plant have switched to the bulk operation.

Wisley said the reasons for changing to bulk are to provide a better quality of Grade B milk which in turn induces a better market for the milk products. - - -

At present, Crystal Dairy sells exclusively to Kraft Foods, since that firm is the only one in this area capable of using the entire production of Crystal plants here, in Peru and at Summitville.

TOMBAUGH, JEAN C.

Talk On Family Research

The Sentinel, Feb. 24, 1964

The Manitou Chapter of the DAR met in the home of Mrs. Fred Hodel. - - - -

Mrs. Wendell Tombaugh gave a most interesting talk entitled "Climbing The Family Tree", relating her many years of research in tracing the history of her ancestors. She gave many bits of information, which could be very helpful to persons interested in learning more about their ancestors.

One important item stressed was that one should work backwards, year by year, generation by generation, in their search for information about their family.

Research could start with the family Bible, search of the county Court House records of all sorts, during the years of the ancestor's residence in an area.

Mrs. Tombaugh found that it is important and helpful to keep in mind the locality where one's family lived, and its history. From what earlier state or county was it settled. What successive groups of settlers came in, were settlers predominantly members of a certain church. Seldom did a family migrate alone to a new home, but went with a group to a locality where there were friends from their home town.

In her personal research, Mrs. Tombaugh also found that certain sections of Ohio were settled primarily from Connecticut, while other sections were settled primarily from Virginia, and still others from Pennsylvania. Certain portions of the "panhandle" of West Virginia were settled, not from Pennsylvania, as might be expected, but from Virginia. There were areas in what is now West Virginia that had a heavy migration from New Jersey soon after the Revolutionary War. In the north, there was a definite movement from Rhode Island to Vermont during and immediately after the Revolution. In many cases the settlers came by following an established route of travel. It is important to know the route of migration to a new area from the older settlements.

By checking birth, marriage, death certificates, census and family records, one can usually get an ancestor placed in the locality where he or she lived prior to 1830, and as early as 1800.

Mrs. Tombaugh stated in her personal research she found when she had completed tracing her family's history, she knew much more about history in general than she thought possible. - - - -

MASTODON BONES

At University of Utah

The Sentinel, March 12, 1964

A mastodon skeleton, excavated on the farm of James O. Wells west of Rochester in 1960 by scientists from Earlham college, soon will find its way to the University of Utah in exchange for the skeleton of an allosaurus.

The story began when Wells, a 1951 graduate of Earlham, discovered unusual bones on his farm. He notified James Cope, director of the Joseph Moore Museum at Earlham, who supervised the excavation and identified the bones as belonging to a mastodon that had roamed northern Indiana at the end of the Ice Age some 10,000 years ago.

Although the bones were considered a good find, it happened that Earlham already had a mastodon on display in the museum. So Cope arranged to exchange the extra mastodon for a surplus allosaurus skeleton from Utah.

The allosaurus skeleton is complete except for the skull, but Cope is negotiating with Princeton university for an extra skull. The allosaurus, which lived during the age of dinosaurs millions of years before the development of mammals, is similar to the larger tryannosaurus rex.

Both were giant lizards which had small forelegs and walked on their large hind legs, balancing themselves with their huge tails.

Cope, with the help of an Earlham student and a truck driver, will deliver the mastodon and pick up the allosaurus skeleton during the break between winter and spring terms at Earlham. The experts to be back at the Richmond campus for the start of the spring term March 23.

CROOKS, EX-SINGER

Visits Lake Manitou

The Sentinel, June 4, 1964

Billy Crooks, who sang with the Amos Otstott band that featured teenager Marilyn Maxwell as vocalist at the Colonial Hotel and Terrace Gardens in the 1930s, has returned to Lake Manitou "to get his batteries recharged."

Now free-lance sports broadcaster and photographer, Crooks is spending a few days fishing at the lake after working at the Indianapolis "500" during the Memorial Day weekend.

He'll leave Friday for Milwaukee to cover a 100-mile race.

Crooks appeared with Otstott's band at the Colonial in 1937, when Miss Maxwell, accompanied by her mother, was with the organization. She went on to fame as a movie actress and entertainer.

Some time ago, Crooks and Miss Maxwell met for the first time in several years while she was on locaton for a movie. He mentioned he planned to attend the 500-Mile Race at Indianapolis and she said, "If you happen to get up to Rochester, please remember me to all my friends there."

The appeal of Lake Manitou kept Crooks in this area after Otstott's band left. He remained to work for Colonial owner A.C. Bradley for about a year.

He moved on and subsequently learned the broadcasting and photography business. He lives in Encino, Cal., but travels widely throughout the U.S. to major sports events.

At the Indianapolis "500" he worked with the Studebaker-Novi crew and his red 1964 Pontiac convertible is distinguished by several STP decals.

School Door Canteen
To Be a Parking Lot
The Sentinel, June 10, 1964

Plans for a free off-street parking lot near the downtown district of Rochester moved ahead today following their approval by the board of trustees of the Rochester Community schools.

The board, at its regular meeting Tuesday noon, agreed to the use of the former School Door Canteen property at Seventh and Jefferson streets for the parking lot. This is located one block west of Main street.

School board and city officials had met earlier to discuss joint efforts to bring about the parking facilities.

School trustees agreed Tuesday to tear down the brick building now on the site. It originally was a private residence, later was used as a school Door Canteen and last as kindergarten quarters before the new elementary schools were built here.

The building is in no further use to the school corporation. Erstwhile plans to utilize it as an administration center came to naught because estimates of its remodeling proved prohibitive.

Superintendent John Davisson will contact persons concerning the cost of immediately razing of the building. The board's only stipulation in making the decision was that the lot be put into use this year.

Mayor Harrison Halterman said today that the city intends to see that this is done, yet this summer. He emphasized that there would be no meters on the lot, which can park at least 35 cars. The city will fill the building excavation, level the area, blacktop it and place entrance and exit off Jefferson street. The Mayor said that no tax funds will be used, enough money being available in the off-street parking fund to pay for the improvements.

Lease arrangements are to be worked out between the school and city. School authorities will retain ownership, since future school-hour use of the area might become necessary.,

In such case, Davisson said, there would be no interference with normal parking utilization of the lot during business hours.

This will give the city a fourth off-street parking lot. One is located off Main at Seventh street and is metered, another is in use for free off Madison street under the city water tower and a second free lot is on the east side of the Courthouse. - - - -

Robert Delp has purchased the interests of his partners - Fred Brown, Joe Quick and Dick Newell - in The Chalk & Cue recreation center, 806 Main street, Delp announced today.

The center, at which pocket billiards and table tennis are played, will retain the same name.

Delp said future plans call for establishing pocket billiards and table tennis leagues for men, women, boys and girls, "date nights" and "father and son nights" and an appearance by a woman professional pocket billiards player.

PRESTON, MR. & MRS.

Enjoying Home Life

The Sentinel, August 17, 1964

Actor Robert Preston may never sign another screen contract, he says. He likes his home too much.

He and his wife, Catherine, really live it up at their home in Rye, N.Y., particularly in the summer. This is something he couldn't do if he were at the beck and call of studios, he points out.

Mrs. Preston is the former Catherine Feltus of Bloomington, who is well-known by many Rochester persons. She spent many of her childhood summers at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Judson Buchanan, on the east shore of Lake Manitou.

The two met when they were fellow students at Pasadena Playhouse and will celebrate their 24th wedding anniversary this year.

"I love all the work of a house, mowing lawns, pruning trees, carrying logs, filling up holes, patching sheds, and it's not easy for an actor to have that kind of hard life. You've got to plan it," he says, laughing.

A tremendously popular fellow with a booming voice, Preston has the kind of ruggedness that needs an earthy background. He is one of the most virile looking actors on stage or screen.

His home, a carriage house on part of an old estate in Rye, is on a mill pond where "about 250 ducks migrate," he says, about 45 minutes from New York.

He recently wound up a Broadway run in "Nobody Loves an Albatross" and is preparing for a title role in the musical, "Ben Franklin In Paris."

"Bob plays energetic roles like this one all the time," says his wife. "This house gives him the kind of outlet he needs, and he loves four seasons, something we didn't have in California."

Even when he's been on location making a picture, he's just happy to know the house "will be there when I get back," he says.

"Once a week I have one whole glorious day to do whatever I like around the place. It's something special for Catherine and me. Everyone leaves us alone and we stay free of all social commitments. Our hours are too different to conform to a community pattern," he explains.

But when the Prestons extend an invitation, they are sticklers for punctuality.

"When I invite people for 7 o'clock, I like them to show up at 7," he says. "I like candles lit, fire lit in winter, everything on time, and not too many cocktails before dinner. I want everyone to enjoy what Catherine has prepared," he says.

In California, an invitation meant "be an hour late," he says, and they startled one well-known actress by actually being on time. "She was flabbergasted."

They don't have a maid in their seven-room house because they decided "we wanted privacy more than help," he says.

Catherine cooks and is so good, "all the restaurant men we know try to steal her recipes," he says proudly. He does the outdoor barbecues - steaks or chicken with garlic and butter sauce.

"I learned to cook when I helped my father sell a line of cookware at home parties. We'd cook a whole meal for 14 to 18 people. I liked that, but not the cleaning up I had to do as the swamper," he says.

A do-it-yourselfer, Preston is building some chairs in the old cow barn used as a tool shed.

Unlike California where they had a swimming pool, he takes a shower by hanging the hose over an apple tree. "There's a lot of privacy when leaves are on the trees," he explains.

Catherine has a green thumb and even her pumpkins are monsters. Last year she pollinated the seeds by going from flower to flower with a little brush because the "bees seemed to be ignoring the seeds," she says.

Preston may be sour on movie contracts but he likes to do occasional movies. His current, "All the Way Home," is a portrayal of the life of the father of James Agee, who wrote the Pulitzer Prize autobiographical novel.

He began his Broadway career in 1951 but has had time for a few films in recent years, although he played in "The Music Man" on Broadway and in the films.

JOAQUIN MILLER

By Waldo Adams

The Sentinel, Oct. 30, 1964

Cincinnatus Heiner (Joaquin) Miller, the noted California poet, was born in Indiana and spent his boyhood there until he was 13 years of age. His boyhood years may be grouped into four divisions around the four places he and his family lived in that state.

The first period concerns his birth and babyhood near Liberty, Ind. He stated that he was born in 1841, but evidence (1) proved the date to be March 10, 1839. He lived there until late in 1840. The second period is concerned with his home in Randolph county from 1840 to sometime in 1842. The third period of his life was spent in Grant county and covers the years from 1842 to 1848. The fourth and last period of his life was spent in Fulton County, Ind., and covers the years 1848 to 1852.

On March 17, 1852, the family left Fulton county to begin the great trek to Oregon and the Far West where Joaquin was to make much of his reputation as an author and poet.

Several reasons may be advanced for the presence of the Miller family in Fulton county. The one usually given by students is that the Millers were already on the road to the West and passed through Fulton County because of the location there of that great artery of transportation through Northern Indiana - the Michigan Road. One author (2) says they were on the way to Chicago when they passed through Fulton county.

There is considerable merit in this belief, because the Michigan Road did end at Michigan City, Ind., a city which still is only 50 miles east of Chicago, one of the great Jumping-off places for the Great West. The fact that the Millers actually left for St. Louis, Mo., when they did go in 1852 may indicate some change in their plans while passing through Fulton county. This raises some question about Chicago being their objective when they left Grant county in 1848.

The road taken by the Millers to Fulton county from Grant county was that one which is still in use from Peru, the old South Mississinewa River Road. From Peru they came up the old Peru road to Rochester. These northwest-running roads were traveled by pioneer settlers from central Indiana to the north and northwest parts of the state after the Indian lands were opened for purchase and settlement following the removal of the Indians forcibly in 1832 - a date much later than that for the removal of the Indians from Central Indiana.

Joaquin's father, Hulings Miller, had come to Grant county in 1842 and purchased 160 acres of former Indian lands there from the United States for one and fourth dollars per acre. This land formed a part of the old Mississinewa Indian Reserve which had been opened for settlement. (3) The tract purchased was in Grant county near Jalapa. (4) The only town then was Marion. Hulings taught a school in Pipe Creek, worked in a sawmill near his cabin, and was a Justice of the Peace. (5)

Another reason for their being in Fulton county may be hazarded. When Hulings Miller came to Fulton county he immediately purchased former Indian lands which had been opened for settlement only a few years earlier. It is reasonable to suppose that Hulings was intrested in purchasing former Indian lands because he had made a handsome profit (6) when he sold (7) that kind of land in Grant county. The land he had owned earlier in Randolph county, was likewise former Indian lands. When the Millers left Grant county it was common knowledge that there was good Indian land to be obtained for $1.25 per acre in the Tippecanoe country.

A further reason for the Millers coming to Fulton county may have been the state of education in that county. Hulings Miller was the best educated person in the settlement in Grant county. He taught school there as he had formerly in Randolph county. He was also a Justice of the Peace there. The title of Squire was to stay with him for the rest of his life.

Fulton county did not have public schools in 1848 but it did have small one-room subscription schools. Teaching school offered a little cash income to an educated man. There is some evidence (8) that Miller learned of a school in Fulton county that lacked a teacher. This fact probably influenced him to locate in Newcastle township, about seven miles north-east of Rochester. There is no doubt of his passing through Rochester on his way to the new home. Coming from Peru he would have had to come through the little village of Rochester, two miles south of the bridge across the Tippecanoe river. The school was on the north side of this river.

When the Millers came the river was in flood stage and the only bridge for miles in each direction was that on the Old Michigan Road. This bridge was a part of its construction which was completed in 1837. (8a)

The Miller family was not a poor one when it came to Fulton county. Hulings had made a profit of nearly $1,000 from the sale of his land in Grant county. (9) He had also received an indemnity payment of $200 for the destruction of his sheep by Indian dogs through the influence of Hugh McCullogh, an Indian trader. (10) To these sums he added smaller amounts of hard cash from his work as a teacher and as Justice of the Peace.

The mother and three boys were also very industrious and earned a little cash from the sale of maple sugar and from spinning and weaving of cloth. (11) The father seemed to do some selling, for there is a story of his dealing in clocks, a venture which was not profitable. It can be stated fairly that Hulings Miller ranked rather high in comparison with his neighbors when the family came to Fulton county.

Hulings Miller secured the teaching position in Newcastle township and was able to make the home close-by. He purchased 40 acres of the Culvers (12) located in the northwest one-fourth of section 15. The farm included a cabin for the family and the land (13) was planted in corn.. (14) Probably some livestock was kept, such as sheep, cattle and a horse or two. He also grew melons on the sandy loam of the farm. The melons provided the admission price to a circus (15) then showing in Rochester.

Those days on the Fulton county farm are recalled in several of Joaquin Miller's poems which he wrote at a later date in California. One of these poems, entitled "When Little Sister Came," recalls the birth of his sister.

WHEN LITTLE SISTER CAME (16)

We dwelt in the woods of the Tippecanoe

In a lone lost cabin with never a view
Of the full day's sun for a whole year through

Then with strange half-hints through the russet corn
We three were hurried one night. Next morn

There was frost on the trees and a sprinkle of snow
And tracks on the ground. We burst through the door -

A girl baby cried - and then we were four.

The circus experience referred to above is recalled in the following paragraph by Joaquin Miller at a much later date. (17)

What a whirl! What a rush and roar! The shrill music, melody surely, over and above all the clamor.
And how the tumblers tumbled, the spotted horses circled and the painted clowns kept the center, and the impressive ringmaster cracked his whip savagely around and over all thngs.

I had never dreamed that there was anything waiting along the road of my coming years so grand and so glorious as this! How we did talk to mother and sister that night.

The farming operations seemed to be fairly successful for there was surplus corn. It was hauled to Logansport, (18) a distance of 30 miles. A cash corn market there was the only one for many miles around. Miller also employed several hired hands to help him and his three sons with the farm work.

Hulings Miller seemed never to have finished paying for the farm (19) which he had bought on a contract basis from the Culvers. For this reason no record of the purchase could be found in the Fulton county courthouse deed and mortgage records.

The school taught by Hulings Miller and attended by his son, Cincinnatus H. (Joaquin) was known as the Wright school. Its location was determined with considerable accuracy because of its peculiar situation. A schoolmate stated it was located in the southeast quarter of Section 15, (20) and the farm purchased by Miller was in the northwest quarter of Section 15.

The schoolhouse was described by the schoolmate as being located across the road from the farm residence but in the southeast quarter of land owned at the time by the Wrights. Since a public road also forms the boundary and central point between the two diagonal sections, the school grounds can only be at a very definite spot.

No exact date can be determined for its erection. The closest estimate seems to center around the years 1840 to 1845. It is known that it was erected before the present Wright farmstead buildings, which were built in 1852. (21)

The building was rectangular shaped and covered with sawed weather boards. It was not built of logs. It had no belfry or bells. The teacher probably had a hand bell which served the purpose of calling the pupils from play. No one could recall of a well being there. Water was probably carried from the farm home nearby.

Mrs. Bonine (21) recalled that her father, Gorge Perschbacher, moved the school building to the Wright farmstead which he then owned, and converted it into a storage for grain. It was originally floored, having joists and foundation stones beneath. It did not have puncheon floors.

She recalled the building, when used as a school, had a long wood-burning stove capable of burning the long lengths of wood cut in those days. The building was standing and used as a storage as late as 1930. (22) Mrs. Bonine (23) confirmed the original location as described earlier by Mrs. Swanger. (19)

Mrs. Snyder, the present owner of the old Wright Farm, recalled that the second location of the building was somewhat in front of the farm home, much to her mother's annoyance. (24) Mrs. Kiler was the daughter of Mr. Perschbacher and the mother of Mrs. Snyder.

The building was torn down in the 1930s and the materials were used to construct a garage which still stands near the Wright farm home. Ralph Hatfield (25) of Talma recalls the old schoolhouse setting very near the old Wright home during the 1930s.

The Wright farm, now owned by Mrs. Snyder, presently is occupied by the Calvin Mikesell family. It is north of the Tippecanoe river from the Sheward bridge crossing. The Wright school was located at this T-road intersection north of the Mikesell residence, which is the intersection of County Road 375E with 550N. The Hulings Miller homestead now is the Mrs. Lloyd Ritchey farm, north of the T-intersection.

At the time the Millers came to Fulton county Joaquin was a lad of nine years. Schoolmates say he seemed eager to earn. The schools were of the subscription type and boys that age had little or no cash to pay the tuition.

George Perschbacher, (27), a schoolmate, recalled he, himself, had traded a fine fir cap the teacher, John Dawson, took a liking for in return for six weeks of schooling.

Joaquin attended the school taught by his father. Joaquin had learned to write in 1845 shortly before he had come to Fulton county. (28) His father had taught him to write in Grant county. (28) When it is recalled that "lickin and learnin" customarily went together in those early subscription schools it is no surprise to learn that Joaquin received at least one severe trashing at the hands of his father. Mrs. Swanger remembered this incident. (29)

The subjects studied by the pupils were the three Rs with spelling and geograpy taught less frequently. Saturday night spelling bees were common. Joaquin recalled that his brother, John D., was frequently a winner. (30) This could not be said for Joaquin who either could not spell or affected a phonetic type in his mature years. Slates were in common use for practice exercises but quill pens and oak-gall ink were reserved for practice exercises but quill pens and Oak-gall ink were reserved for the writing exercises. The ability to make a writing pen out of a large feather was one of the requirements for a schoolmaster of these years. The quill pen used by Joaquin is said to be located in his museum home overlooking San Francisco Bay in Oakland, Cal. (28)

His double slate was given to a schoolmate when the Miller family left for the West. The schoolmate (29) presented it to the Rochester high schoiol Library for safe-keeping. However, a fire which damaged the library in 1950 also destroyed the slate (33) It was a double type with binding aroiund the wooden frame and hinged so that the two writing surfaces could be closed like a book. (30)

Some reading materials current at that date were in the Miller home. Joaquin recalled later how his father's reading of the experiences of John C. Fremont filled him with admiration. (16) It is true that Fremont did become his idol and ideal. A large painting of Fremont is located in the Miller Museum near Oakland, Cal.

While the Millers were living in Fulton county the War with Mexico ended and gold was discovered at Sutter's Mill. News of these events were discussed in the Miller home, and fed the latent desire to go West, where free land was available. The news of the Whitman Indian Massacre in Oregon was also known by the Millers and is thought by some biographers (32) to have caused some postponement of the plans to trek West. Visitors to the Miller farm were excited by the tales of the gold discoveries. Joaquin recalled one of these visitors in the following sketch.. (36)

A tall dark man in buckskin came to where papa and I were splitting rails and setting the butt of his long rifle heavily on the ground and throwing his right fist away toward the West with a sweep. Shouted out "Gold! Gold! Gold! Squire they have found gold by the Wagon load in California; by the cart load by Gum. The ground is full of gold in Californy and I'm going to Californy."

He hastened out to where the boys were plowing and followed them up in the furrow talking and gesticulating wildly as he went. At dinner we could talk, think, and eat nothing but "Californy."

However, the fever to go West grew higher and higher. Finally Hulings Miller and his family made final preparations to go West in the spring of 1852. (37) Everything that could be turned into cash was sold and purchases were made for the long trek. Two large prairie schoioner type wagons were secured and loaded. Each wagon was pulled by four ox teams. Four horses were purchasd, two pulling a buggy or carriage in which Mother Miller and her daughter rode, one for Hulings, and the fourth was to be shared by the Miller boys and two young men helpers. (38)

A farewell party (38) was held for the Millers, and friends for miles around came to see them off, with parting gifts, goodbyes and best wishes. It was March 17, 1852, almost exactly 112 years ago as this is being written. The thrill of these days was never to be forgotten by the young Joaquin, now a boy of 13 and large for his age.

The road taken West from the little farm and school was that still in use, one mile south and west and three miles straight West to the Michigan Road. There they certainly turned souh passing through Rochester on the way to Logansport. There a road led toward Illinois. Thus the Miller family left Indiana. Their dstination was St. Louis, Mo., the great “jumping-off” place for the West. Joaquin later described the start for the Great West in a poem called “Exodus for Oregon.” (40)

EXODUS FOR OREGON

A tale half told and hardly understood
The talk of bearded men that chanced to meet
That leaned on long quaint rifles in the wood
That looked on fellow faces spoke discreet
And low as half in doubt and in defeat
Of hope; a tale was lands and gold
That lay below the sun. Wildwinged and fleet
It spread among the swift Missouri’s bold
Unbridled men, and reached to where Ohio rolled.

The long chained lines of yoked and patient steers
Then long white trains that pointed toward the West
Beyond the savage west, the hopes and fears
Of blunt untutored men who hardly guessed
Their course, the brave and silent women dressed
In lovely attire, the boys in bands
The cheery babes that laughed at all and blesses
The doubting hearts, with laughing lifted hands!
What exodus for far untraversed lands!

The plains! The shouting drivers at the wheel
The crash of leather whips; the crush and roll
Of wheels; the groan of yokes and grinding steel
And iron chains and low! At last the whole
Vast line that reached as if to touch the goal
Began to stretch and stream away and wind
Toward the West, as if one control
Then hope loomed fair and home lay far behind
Before the boundless plain, and fiercest of their kind.

A proposal to place a suitable marker at the site of the old Wright school is under consideration by the Fulton County Historical Society. Two other Indiana counties have already erected markers.

Union county has placed a marker and named a highway for Joaquin Miller. There is also a marker in Grant county near Jalapa where the Millers lived just before coming to Fulton county.

Joaquin Miller’s home and school in Fulton county probably deserve this recognition. He writes more recollections about his home along the Tippecanoe than he did about the other homes in Indiana.

He is the most illustrious poet and writer ever to have lived and received an education in Fulton county, Ind.

In Miller's later life, he wrote an article in defense of the Mexican bandit, Joaquin Murieta, and when he published his first book he took Joaquin as a pen name. Miller is best remembered today for the poem, "Columbus."

He ran away from home in Oregon at the age of 17 and lived in various mining camps and with the Indians in California. An Indian tribe adopted him and he married a chief's daughter. After she was killed in an accident, Miller returned to Oregon and became a lawyer, but spent his time writing.

In 1871 he visited England, where he published his first notable collection of poems, "Songs of the Sierras." His verses were filled with a love of the West and its romantic spirit. The poet's picturesque Western dress, wide-brimmed hat, soft shirt and trousers tucked into high boots added to his popularity in London.

Miller worked on newspapers in New York City and Washington, D.C., upon his return to the U.S. He lived in California from 1887 until his death in 1913. His works include "Songs of the Sunlands," "Songs of the Mexican Seas" and a novel, "The Danites."

BARR, JOHN A.

Dean, Northwestern U.

The Sentinel, Dec. 7, 1964

John A. Barr, native of Akron, has been appointed dean of the school of business at Northwestern university, Evanston, Ill.

Barr, 56, is former president of Montgomery Ward & Company and currently is serving as chairman of the board for the mail order firm.

In his new post, Barr will hold the rank of professor of business administration. J. Roscoe Miller, president of the university, said that Barr will succeed Richard Donham in the post June 1. Donham has resigned to return to teaching.

Barr has been a member of Northwestern's board of trustees since 1957. He was an honor graduate of the Indiana university law school and practiced law at Gary before joining Ward.

MONTGOMERY WARD

Revitalized by John A. Barr

The Sentinel, Dec. 8, 1964

Akron's John A. Barr, who assumed control of the vast Montgomery Ward & Company at a time when the merchandising firm was in deep trouble, leaves it revitalized and in an excellent competitive position.

It was announced over the weekend that Barr will relinquish the chairmanship of Montgomery Ward on June 1 to become dean of Northwestern university's school of business.

His departure will leave Robert E. Brooker, president, as the sole chief executive officer. Brooker was one of the top men turned up by Barr in an executive search program inaugurated shortly after he took control. He and Brooker have been sharing top executive duties.

Brooker said Monday that "Mr. Barr has fulfilled his trust to stockholders and to employees as a director for 15 years and as chairman of the board for 10 years. He is leaving us at a time when employees and management have a new spirit of vitality, and at a time when the company is ably staffed in our merchandising department as well as in both our retail and catalog field organizations. We expect to accelerate the rate of improvement in our sales, earnings and services to our customers.

When the Akron-born Barr took over the huge retail and mail-order firm in 1955, no such statement as the foregoing could have been made.

In 1955, Barr was secretary of the company when a group led by Louis Wolfson, eastern industrialist, waged a proxy fight for control of Montgomery Ward. Barr stepped into the fight when Sewell Avery, aging Ward president, proved unable to do battle because of his health.

Barr stepped in as presiding officer, brought order out of chaos and stood off the company's besiegers. Shortly thereafter, he was made chairman and chief executive officer. He went on to rebuild executive and merchandising staffs and set the company on an expansion and improvement course unknown in its history. At that time Montgomery Ward had not built a new store in 14 years.

In moving to Northwestern, Barr is opening a third career at the age of 56. Before beginning 35 years with Ward he was a lawyer in Gary. Now he takes over the N.U. School of business that has a full-time faculty of 72, with an undergraduate school on the Evanston campus and a graduate school in downtown Chicago.

He also will hold the rank of professor of business administration, with considerable practical experience to back up this title.

Dr. J. Roscoe Miller, Northwestern president, said that “Northwestern is singularly fortunate in obtaining the services of such a distinguished business leader, one who has deep and abiding academic interests.”

Barr, who has been an N.U. Trustee for seven years, said he is “looking forward to the challenge of helping one of the nation’s great universities fulfill its mission of providing ever-better academic training for the large numbers of young people who are seeking more and better education.”

Barr is a graduate of Akron high school, DePauw university and of the Indiana university school of law. His mother, Mrs. Bertha Barr, resides in Akron and is visited frequently by her son. His father, Earl Barr, is deceased.

He was the guest of honor and featured speaker at the Akron high school alumni association banquet May 12, 1962. Barr and his wife reside in Winnetka, Ill. They have four children, George, a banker in Chicago, Robert, a lawyer in Evanston, Richard, with the Peace Corps in Uruguay, and Barbara, a high school student.

FULTON CO. SUN

Ceased Publication

The Sentinel, Dec. 14, 1964

The Fulton County Sun, morning daily newspaper published in Rochester, ceased publication with today’s issue. The paper, of half-tabloid size, had been published since July 24 of this year.

Lack of county support and of capital funds were given as reasons for the failure of the newspaper. Richard McKee was president of the publication and also succeeded M.L. Whittenberger as editor and publisher when the latter left the firm five weeks after its start.

FULTON CO. FAIR

“Considered Comment”

The Sentinel, Dec. 14, 1964

CONSIDERED COMMENT

By H.A.B.

In this fast moving age thrills come to teenagers and young people when they see the President, obtain an autograph of a movie, tv, baseball, football or basketball star, or perhaps the biggest of all, when they see and hear the Beatles.

But to those of us old enough to remember, none of these compared to the thrills which came to youngsters and their parents when the Fulton County Fair rolled around each September. That really was an event which no one missed or ever forgot.

Memories of those exciting days came back on our perusing the Official Catalogue of the Fulton County Fair, Sept. 28-29-30, Oct 1, 1898. It listed the event as the 27th annual exhibition, which establishes 1871 as the date of the first fair in Rochester. The red covered booklet, printed by The Rochester Daily Republican press on rag paper, looks as good as new today. It was brought to light by Mrs. Earl Sisson.

The introductory page was the work of Val Zimmerman, secretary, and stated, "With a great deal of pride and pleasure the Officers and Members of the Fulton County Agricultural and Mechanical Society submit this large and beautiful catalog of the 27th Exhibition which we promise shall be the largest and grandest in the history of the Association. No pains, time or money shall be spared in bringing about that end. Special attractions, amusements and exhibitions with prizes will merit your time and energy in competition. To that end let us all work together and when the gates are closed all can say that this fair outshone all previous exhibitions as the "sun excels the rays of the moon."

All gambling, including thimble-rig, monte bank, chuch-a-luck, shell games and faro was excluded and "nothing will be tolerated which need offend the morals of any person. On Saturday there will be a grand parade of all stock receiving premiums preceded by a band of music." Family season tickets were $1, single admissions 25 cents.

Officers were John W. Black, president; George Perschbacher, vice-president; Val Zimmerman, secretary; A.C. Copeland, treasurer; Henry F. Mow, marshal. Directors in addition included George W. Miller, Arch Stinson, A.J. Haimbaugh, John H. Wilson, S.V. Gordon, J.J. King, Fred Agster and Milton McCaughey.

The Horse Races furnished the main excitement each afternoon and the rules of the speed department were lengthy and strict. Today those who visit City Park on the west limits of Rochester can see remains of the track.

A high board fence surrounded the grounds and exhibitors were scattered over the area in the heavy grove of oak trees. In fact, those who sat in the grandstand near the southwest turn could witness only the start and finish of each race on the home stretch as the back side of the track was hidden by the trees. But despite this the trotting and pacing events brought the crowds to the rails to watch the horses with drivers on rubber tired carts speed by. All purses were "guaranteed" while the "Free-For All Pace" and the "Free-For-All Trot" had total prize monies of $125 which were divided among the first four winners on a 50-25-15-10 percent basis. Smaller purses offered were $100 and & 75.

The list of premiums was lengthy with first prize money for horses being $6. Thoroith-bred cattle winners also received $6, the top sheep won $4 and best hogs received the same amount. Chicken fanciers could not count on big money as the winner was awarded 75 cents and second prize was 40 cents. In the agriculture department fruit, vegetables, seed and grain had first awards of $1 or 50 cents. Flowers and plants brought the exhibitors $2 while certain varieties gave them 50 cents or 25 cents. Prizes for the best bread, canned fruit, preserves, jellies and fruit butter were worth $1.00 down to 25 cents.

In the mechanical department dealers who exhibited farm implements received no cash but were given diplomas. Carriage harness display winners were paid $3 while wagon harness "firsters" took home $2. The carriage judged to be the best shown won $4 while a one horse wagon winner pocketed $3. Prizes for embroidery, needle work, quilts, robes, socks, comforts, ladies underwear and infant outfits won $1, 50 cents or 25 cents for the exhibition. Many merchants offered special merchandise prizes for the best fruit cake, watermelon, blackberry wine, butter, cabbage, roosters and potatoes.

Rochester stores advertisd in the premiums list with appeals that seem strange in the present day.

The Blue Drug Store offered drugs, tobaccos, soaps, paints, bicycles, fishing tackle, ammunition, baseball goods and "the best soda water". The Erie railroad published "elegant vestibule trains on the Lake Chautauqua Route". W.F. Kirkendall, practical dentist, let it be known he would extract teeth with gas or local anesthsis and guaranteed all work to be first class.

John Shryer, practical horse shoer, stated he gave special attention to shoeing roadsters, overreaching, stumbling, tender and contracted feet. P.M. Shore, from the North End Drug Store, offered one box of Shore's Tar Cndy for coiughs, colds and sore throat for 5 cents. Karn and Conner claimed they had the only Up-To-Date Meat Market in the city and their telephone number was 17.

Miss Minta Hisey, the Fashionable Dress Maker, guaranteed perfect fitting for style, cutting neatness of hand or machine stitching. The Studebaker Wagon was featured by John R. Barr while M.J. Beach offered horse collars, whips, robes, dusters, fly nets and sweat pads.

The Emrick & Metcalf "Fashionable Millinery Emporium" boasted of the "latest designs of Paris and American styles." J.G. Hill advertised a complete line in carriages, wagons, harness and repairing along with horse shoeing and ended his ad by stating, "Remember the

Chas. W. Brackett, “the fashionable liveryman” kept first class rigs ready at all hours while special attention was given to boarding and feeding horses. If you paid “Spot Cash” for your groceries at Chas. A. Kilmer’s store you enjoyed “rock bottom prices.” The Lake Erie & Western railroad, not to be outdone, claimed to be “The Only Natural Gas Route” and boasted of parlor and sleeping cars. Merchant tailoring was emphasized by William Brinkman with suits made to order from $16 up.

Finally the Cigar Makers Union No. 379 had a full page appeal for all fair minded men “to assist us in the suppression of the sale of scab cigars and stogies. Shrink from them as you would the most venomous reptile and assist in the maintenance of good old honest American wages.”

Yes, the Fulton County Fair was the one time of the year when the good people of Fulton county drove into town and out to the grounds for a day of seeing the exhibits, watching the races, taking in the shows, passing on gossip or news and visiting with old and new friends. The children lived from one year to the next to attend the fair. It was a time before the automobile, the flying machine, electricity on the farm, paved roads, washing machines, radio, television, motion pictures and when few people traveled far from home.

You understand why the fair had much to offer young and old and that it promoted progress in those good old days of rugged individualism. . . . H.A.B.

KERN’S XMAS TREES

Article in American Forests

The Sentinel, Dec. 18, 1964

[The following appears as the lead article in the December issue of American Forests, nationally-distributed magazine of the American Forestry Association and the top publication in its field. It gives nationwide recognition to the Christmas tree business of Bob Kern of this city.]

Fulton county, Ind., is mostly corn and hog country. That is, except for Bob Kern Christmas Trees.

In the business since he got out of the Navy in 1947, Bob today owns 400 acres planted to upwards of 500,000 Eastern white and Scotch pines and some spruces and firs. Other Kern lands are in soy beans, which help control weeds and will one day be planted in more Christmas trees.

It’s Christmas the year around at the Kerns, for Christmas-tree growing to a professional is no hit or miss proposition. It is in late October and November when the Kern enterprizes go into high gear and work seven days a week.

Forest fires due to drought on land adjacent to Kern property created an extra source of concern this season.

As usual, November found Bob's 1964 crop sold out. His trees go mostly to satisfied customers in nearby states and as far away as Phoenix, Ariz. Four big truck loads, 800 trees each, started for the sunshine of Arizona in November.

Kern's trees are beautifully symmetrical and bushy and this doesn't just happen by accident.

Each summer, boys and girls home from high school and college go to work shearing the Kern plantations. Sharp knives are preferred today; the cutter's right leg (left leg if left-handed) is protected by leg guards. The knives are more efficient than the old pruning shears, Kern says.

Another new Kern wrinkle is spraying trees with colorant in late summer or early fall. This costs 15 cents a tree but makes the tree look fresher and greener. The idea was first developed for lawns and for "off-color" trees in the South; it was picked up by some Christmas tree growers. Next year Kern expects to add green color to all of his trees.

Today, the race goes to the swift in the Christmas tree business. Foresters and others oversold the business after World War 11, Kern thinks. Too many people were unable to give the tree grooming the attention required.

But the secret of success is really an old story. Give the customer a good product is the first requirement. Sale-creating marketing ideas are also a must (Kern was one of the first to put "windows" in packaged Christmas trees.).

How does it feel to know that thousands of children delight in his trees every Christmas?

"Just great," says Bob enthusiastically. "But it's a competitive business and getting more so. The man with the best product comes out ahead."

FULTON

New Nitrogen Terminal

The Sentinel, Dec. 28, 1964

The Southern Nitrogen company is constructing a large storage terminal in Fulton.

The terminal will cover ten acres and, when completed, will be capable of storing 15,000 tons of 37 percent low pressure type nitrogen solution and 10,000 tons of 28 or 32 percent non-pressure type nitrogen solution. The terminal will have the most modern of truck and rail loading facilities.

Construction is being done by the Phillips Getschow company, Chicago, and should be completed about March 15.

Officials of Southern Nitrogen voiced strong confidence in this area and its future growth, stating that Fulton was selected as the terminal site due to its favorable location to the area to be served.

The Fulton terminal will serve Indiana, lower Michigan, northwest Ohio and northern Illinois.

The company officials said the growing demand for nitrogen solutions by agriculture in the Midwest created a need for a storage terminal in the Fulton area in order to assure the farmers throughout the area a reliable source of supply.

The Fulton terminal will be filled prior to the need of its customers and will operate on a 24 hours-a-day, seven days-a-week basis during the season.

The Fulton terminal is part of Southern Nitrogen company's latest expansion program in the Midwest area. The expansion involves the construction of a complex of three storage terminals in the Midwest and a main plant which is being built in Cincinnati, O.

Larry Gearhart and his wife and three children plan to move to Fulton in the spring. The Drapaliks made no announcement of their immediate plans.

Four Gearhart brothers now own and operate grocery stores. Besides Larry and Harold, the others are Roger, at Royal Center, and Dick, at Winamac.

Fulton Co Playhouse

Formed

The Sentinel, Jan. 22, 1965

Formation of a civic theatre group in Fulton county started suspiciously Thursday night when 48 persons attended a public organizational meeting at the Times Theatre.

A committee was appointed to nominate a board of directors in time for another public meeting within two weeks. Committee members are Parke Baxter, chairman, and James Shultz, H.C. Herkless, Mrs. Fred Mitchell, Jr., John Delworth, Bob Traeger and Joe Jacob, all of Rochester.

The board of directors presumably also will choose a name for the organization. Fulton County Playhouse has been suggested.

Thursday's meeting was called by Shultz, who acted as temporary chairman. He introduced Mrs. Everett Phippen, president of the Nappanee Civic Theatre, and Mr. & Mrs. James McDonald, of the Nappanee group.

They told their experiences in starting the Nappanee Civic Theatre six years ago, offered advice and answered questions from the audience.

Local persons were heartened about the attendance at Thursday's meeting when they were told only 15 persons showed up for Nappanee's organizational meeting. This group grew to a membership of 400 members during the first year, however.

The Nappanee Civic Theatre has become one of the biggest adult recreation activities in the community, Mrs. Phippen said, because people discovered talent in themselves, they never knew they had.

After two productions, Nappanee began using high school and grade school pupils in the casts, also, and now there is great competition among the young folks for parts. However, only above-average pupils, academically, are used.

Pupils also are used as ushers and usherettes and great prestige comes with selection for these duties. National Honor Society members are used exclusively.

Mrs. McDonald had two main pieces of advice for the local persons:

1. Include as many persons as possible in the many activities connected with staging a production.
2. Enlist the aid of responsible persons who will work to get other persons to help too.

The Nappanee representatives stressed one of the bonus benefits of a civic theatre as getting to know a lot of persons of the community who were strangers before.

Although it is expected that the 600-seat auditorium of the new Rochester high school will be available for productions here when the building is completed next fall, McDonald said, "It's not the facilities that makes a good production - it's your determination and imagination.

He also said the board of directors must consider the moral and cultural standards of its community when choosing the plays to be presented. He said musical comedies are the best attended, but added that variety in the form of drama and non-musical comedies also should be provided.

Except for the first production, Nappanee never has had a director with experience. Local persons with directing talent always have been found. There are different directors for each production at Nappanee.

The visitors emphasized the importance of getting as many persons as possible to try out for parts in plays and in changing cast personnel from one play to another.

At Nappanee, it usually is nine weeks from casting to production. Cast members can expect to be required to devote up to three hours a night, three nights a week for six weeks for rehearsals. On the week of the play, rehearsals are conducted on Sunday afternoon and Monday, Tuesday and Thursday nights.

The play director is appointed by the board of directors. A reading committee of three persons recommends plays, with the final decision resting with the board. The play director chooses the cast, but a casting committee can be of great help by having special knowledge of individuals.

The Nappanee Civic Theatre stages two productions a year, each running two or three nights. The group has 300 paid up members now, but "Sound of Music" played to over 1,000 persons during its thre-night run last year.

As a final word, the Nappanee residents said, "Everyone buys tickets to the plays. No one gets in free, even if he has worked for many hours in staging the production."

Biddinger-Dye Music Ctr

Closing

The Sentinel, Feb. 6, 1965

The press of business and shortage of qualified personnel has caused Trib Biddinger and Herb Dye to decide to close the Biddinger and Dye Music Center at 915 East Ninth street. The store will close after next Saturday's business day.

Although their Rochester store has showed a profit since opening last March 2, Biddinger and Dye said their stores at Warsaw and Peru occupy too much of their time for them to operate the store here, also.

When the Rochester store opened, Howard Amell was its manager. Amell left in July however, to open his own music store in Lafayette.

Mrs. Mary Deniston of Rochester has been receptionist at the local store since its opening, and has demonstrated organs and pianos. The store also sold guitars, stereos, string, woodwind and reed instruments, drums, amplifiers, tape recorders and sheet music.

I.O.O.F. BUILDING

The Sentinel, Feb. 17, 1965

The three-story IOOF building at Main and Ninth streets, home of the Rochester Odd Fellows lodge for 90 years, has been sold by the organization to Alden (Torchy) Knapp of this city.

Knapp, new owner of the IOOF building, said that he had no immediate announcement of plans for the structure.

A downtown landmark of the city for almost a century, the IIOF building was erected in 1875 and purchased and dedicated by the lodge Aug. 12, 1875. Contractors for the 42x100 feet building were Levi Mercer and Andrew Shepherd.

Lodge quarters are located on the top two floors. There are offices on the second floor while the Main street level is occupied by Barnett's Discount Store.

The IOOF lodge has over 200 members currently on its rolls. Chartered in 1847, it is one of the oldest of its kind in Indiana.

The main street floor of the building has contained numerous businesses over the past 90 years. Most recently, it was occupied by Kroger Supermarket. Among other past tenants were Earle Nickelodeon theatre, McClure and Wilson hardware, McMahan Brothers grocery, Kirkendall and Mackey millinery store, Martin Batt dry goods store, Fristoe 10-cent store and Evergreen cafe. Until Kroger moved to the site, the ground level consisted of two business rooms.

MacLain Sisters

Have Their Own Club

The Sentinel, March 18, 1965

The MacLain Sisters have their own club.

It's not that the women are snooty. It's that there are so many of them that a club seems the only way they can get together.

There are 10 sisters - daughters of Mr. & Mrs. Cal MacLain of Kewanna. They live in Kewanna, Grass Creek, Fulton, Royal Center, Plymouth and Inwood.

Being members of a big family was great, but the trouble was that by the time the younger daughter came along, the older ones had married and moved away from home. They hardly had time to get to know one another.

For most women, few things are as sacred as the monthly club meeting. So the daughters hit upon the idea of forming their own club that would meet once a month. That way, they'd get together regularly.

The obvious name of "The MacLain Sisters" was chosen for the organization. It was decided to enlarge the membership to include wives of the brothers of the MacLain sisters and there is one such sister-in-law as a member.

The club meets at the home of one of the sisters each month. If a sister has a birthdate that month (which is quite likely), she is the guest of honor and each of the club members brings her a $1 gift.

The club members are Mrs. Dorcie (Mattie) Raney, Kewanna; Mrs. Loren (Roxie) Fry and Mrs. Lee (Merle) Fry, both of Fulton; Mrs. Cecil (Jessie) Hines and Mrs. Bill (FloraBelle) Hatch, both of Royal Center; Mrs. Harold (Ruth) Clevenger, Inwood; Mrs. Joni (Gladys) Stutzman and Mrs. Allen (Marilyn) Brauer, both of Plymouth); Mrs. Harold (Emily) Sutton, Grass Creek; and Mrs. Lawrence (Mabel) MacLain of Kewanna. The latter is the sister-in-law member.

This month's meeting was featured by "Guest Night." Each sister chose a guest whom she would have chosen for a sister if she had been given a choice.

The guests were Mable Swanson, Rochester; Jane Rentschler, Fulton; Helen Woolington and Shirley Zartman, both of Kewanna; Mary Hite, Betty Engel and Jean Hessler, all of Plymouth; Donna

Kaufman and Annabel Schmeltz, Royal Center, and Marcie Dilts, Burnettsville.

OLIVER, JERRY

SAVINGS & LOAN ASSN

Application Hearing

The Sentinel, June 3, 1965

A hearing has been set for Thursday, June 24, in Washington on the application of seven men for permission to organize a federal savings and loan association in Rochester.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board will conduct the hearing at 2 p.m. at the Letter Carriers building in the capital.

Proposed organizers of the savings and loan firm are Richard Belcher, Jesse Brown, Jay Heyde, Dr. Dean Stinson and John Howkinson, all of Rochester; Garland Masterson, Kewanna, and Joseph Hasler, New Paris, Ill.

The savings and loan association would locate offices in Rochester and serve Fulton county, said Belcher, spokesman for the proposed organizers. This county never has had such a financial institution, although most of the state's counties do include either a state or federal savings and loan group, Belcher said.

If the Washington approval is forthcoming organization of the association will proceed as rapidly as possible. The group hopes to have it in operation next autumn.

Administration of the association would be by a board of directors. It will be a federally-chartered saving and loan institution, primarily to make long-term home loans.

Should no persons indicate their intentions to appear at the scheduled hearing on June 24, it will not be held and approval to organize will be granted.

STEININGER, IRVIN

Ex-Boy Orator

The Sentinel, June 5, 1965

BY DAVE AULT, The Sentinel; Staff Writer

“There’s nothing to write - I’m not news.”

These were the opening words of Irvin Steininger, who, before the turn of the century, was the pride of Fulton county and a prominent person at the age of five-and-one-half. He was known then as “The Hoosier Boy Orator,” and before he was seven years old had a reputation as a brilliant speaker throughout northern Indiana and lower Michigan.

Young Irvin made his first professional speaking engagement at the Academy of Music in Rochester in the spring of 1890 before he was six years old. The Academy was the scene of the county oratorical contest for school students.

Howard Steininger, Irvin’s father, wanted to enter his son in the contest, but the local school board in the Whippoorwill community, where the Steiningers resided wouldn’t allow the boy to enter because he wasn’t in school yet.

So Irvin entered school in the spring of 1890 so he would be eligible to compete in the contest. But when he tried to enter again, the county school board wouldn't let him, saying he was too young and had just started school.

But the board finally conceded to let Irvin present his speech after the contest. A true showman, he didn't have a trace of stage fright and, in his own words, he "stole the show."

Following are excerpts from the account of Irvin's first appearance as published in The Rochester Sentinel on April 9, 1890.

"The appearance of little five year old Irvin Steininger, the Hoosier Boy Orator, at the Academy of Music Friday evening under the management of Dr. Shafer was a howling success.

"Irvin Steininger won profuse laurles and much fame by his wonderful performance on the stage. His recitation, which was in the nature of a lecture to parents on the proper training and education of their children, delivered in two parts, was a marvel both in appropriateness and delivery.

"Every gesture of the little speaker is grace, Every sentence is nicely rounded in emphasis and articulation, and then those bright eyes and chubby face and form captivates the entire audience of 600 people."

Irvin's parents first began to notice that their son had an exceptional memory when they saw him preaching to a flock of chickens, repeating verbatim from the minister's previous Sunday sermon. Irvin's father thought this ability should be developed and first tried out his son's speaking skill at Christmas in 1899, when Irvin gave a speech composed by his father at the Old Grandview Church in the Whippoorwill community.

During the summer of 1890, the Steinheisers moved to Rochester and Irvin's father started publicizing his son's oratorical ability. Soon they were traveling all over northern Indiana, to Elkhart, Wakarusa, Culver, Plymouth, Nappanee and many other towns, as well as in southern Michigan.

All the while, Irvin's father was studying for the ministry and saw to it that his son did a lot of reading. Now, Steininger says that "Books and reading have meant more to me in my life than anything else."

About 1893 the Steiningers moved to Berne, and Irvin's speaking career came to an end there. His father had to make a decision on his son's schooling as well as think of his own career in the ministry.

Irvin entered school again at the age of eight. In gradeschool he was conscious of his reputation and was shy about speaking. But he remembers that when called upon to recite, he was fluent and displayed an above average vocabulary.

Irvin's next residence was in Defiance, O., where his father was assigned to another pulpit. At a Sunday school picnic, the members of the congregation insisted that Irvin make a speech. At first he refused, but at his father's insistence, he gave in.

As he stepped up on the platform, he said to himself, "This is the last time," and it was. Young Irvin deeply resented being singled out as different and being made a spectacle. He was determined to not have it happen again.

Later on, in high school, Irvin's speaking ability helped him, for he wasn't quite so reticent as a teenager.

Irvin finished high school at Logansport and was married there. He was born in 1884 in Labett county in Kansas, lived in Arkansas for about one year and moved to the Whippoorwill community when he was five. After leaving Defiance, the Steiningers lived in Huntington and later his father became manager of Oakwood Park, the present Evangelical United Brethren conference center.

After being married, Irvin worked for the old Vandalia railroad, which later became a part of the Pennsylvania network, for about 14 years. He and his wife, Ruby, moved to Butler, where he was an interchange car inspector with the railroad, and then to Auburn where he went into the electrical business.

Later he was employed by the Auburn automobile company. After it went out of business, he returned to Whippoorwill and began farming. Then he got a job as janitor of a grade school in Lydick and held that job up until his retirement about 10 years ago.

He and his wife reside in Lydick now, but during the summer he makes his home on the banks of the Tippecanoe river, about four miles west of the Indiana Metal Products company plant. He lives alone in a small trailer and has been spending his summers in this manner for the past six or seven years.

He has always been interested in wildlife, especially birds, and considers himself an authority on them. His statement, "When life begins to run out on you, you begin to appreciate it," explains his interest and appreciation for the wildlife along the riverbank.

He states his philosophy simply, yet with reverent sincerity ["To me, all life is sacred now. God and nature are synonymous - I can't separate the two."

Although he lives with as little contact with civilization as possible - he says he's getting to be a recluse - he keeps up on current events and does a lot of reading. He has several dozen volumes of Readers Digest condensed books, from which he does most of his contemporary reading, but he enjoys reading the classics, too.

He feels that today's schools don't place enough emphasis on the classics and says "To us older people, today's kids are ignorant to the things we prized."

Two walls of his trailer are lined with books, but he says his greatest interest still is life - natural life. "My first love is birds, then other plant and animal life."

IOOF BUILDING

To Be Four-Story

The Sentinel, June 17, 1965

The three-story building, a Rochester landmark for 90 years, is in the midst of a transformation that will make it a modern four-story office building.

The building, at the northwest corner of Main and Ninth streets, was purchased in February by Alden (Torchy) Knapp of Rochester. He announced the remodeling plans today.

Stone & Swartzbaugh Inc., Toledo, O., are designers and contractors of the modernization and work is underway.

The exterior of the building is to be covered with a new facade of charcoal and cream colors in vertical patterns. This is being installed from second floor upward at this time, with the ground floor to be completed later.

The facade is of aluminum and glassweld construction, the latter a new product of asbestos fibreboard.

The third floor of the building, formerly the IOOF lodgeroom, is being entirely cleared. Two floors will be made of this one, thus adding a fourth story to the building. - - -

Barnett's Discount Store occupies the Main street front of the building. Otherwise it is vacant.

The IOOF lodge purchased the Rochester Nazarene church at 231 East Eighth street for its new quarters and will occupy it as soon as the church completes construction of its new building south of the city on U.S. 31.

Colonial Hotel

The Sentinel, July 16, 1965

The walls of the Rochester college (1895-1912) have tumbled down. All trace of the large brick building, located at the south end of College avenue, that once housed an accredited educational institution is no more. The learning that it inspired in the students is shown by the men and women who have climbed to success. These friendships still have an emotional hold on its alumni, as was shown Sunday by 71 schoolmates of 53 years ago who renewed acquaintances and met old friends again.

The dinner was at the Colonial hotel, Lake Manitou, where the meal was served on long tables decorated with baskets of garden flowers. Grace was offered by the Rev. Clyde Walters.

John Savage, president of the Alumni group, presided. The program opened by singing "God Bless America" led by M.E. Hicks, Kokomo, with Mrs. Hicks at the piano. The Lord's Prayer was prayed in unison.

Dow Haimbaugh welcomed the many members with much enthusiasm for being loyal to the memories for the Rochester college since it has been out of existence for many years. The friendship that was created long ago grows stronger as is shown by the interested attendance each year.

The secretary and treasurer reports were read by Mrs. Arthur B. Shore.

Roll call was answered by giving maiden name, married name, address, year attended, and incidents of "ye old college days."

Mrs. Raymond McVay gave the names of the alumni members deceased since the last reunion and read the poem "Crossing the Bar" by Tennyson.

The only living professor who taught at Rochester college is Prof. Marion Hall of Lansing, Mich.

The Nominating committee announced the following officers for 1966: President, Ray Myers; vice-president, Russell Smith; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Raymond McVay; vice-secretary and treasurer, Miss Edna Sheets.

The 1966 meeting will be held the second Sunday in July, with the place to be announced later.

M.E. Hicks led the group in singing the songs of yesteryears. Mrs. Hicks presided at the piano. The meeting was adjourned after singing "God be With You Till We Meet Again". Closing prayer was given by Clyde Walters, presiding minister.

Those attending from Rochester were: Clarence Adamson, Ray Myers, Mr. & Mrs. Raymond McVay, Mrs. Bertha Stahl, Norabelle Bryant, Mrs. Dee Berrier, Grace Ewing, Mrs. Ethel Snapp, Mrs. Eunice Coplen, Belva T. FIRST FED S & L

Gets Organizing O.K.

The Sentinel, July 22, 1965

Permission to organize the county's first federal savings and loan association has been given by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

The next step is the granting of a federal charter for operation which will follow securing of pledges for no less than $300,000 in saving accounts from at least than 250 local residents. (sic)

The association will operate in Rochester under the name of First Federal Savings and Loan of Fulton County.

The seven men who petitioned for permission to organize have elected temporary officers to conduct further efforts leading to charter.

These are Richard Belcher, chairman Jay Heyde, vice-chairman, and Jesse Brown, attorney, secretary. All are from Rochester. The remaining members of the committee are Dr. Dean Stinson and John Howkinson, both of Rochester; Garfield Masterson, Kewanna, and Joseph Hasler, New Paris, Ill.

Permission to organize the association was received from the Bank Board's secretary, Harry Caulsen, last weekend. A hearing on the application had been set in Washington June 24 but was cancelled when no persons indicated intentions to appear against it.

Application for a charter will be made after the minimum of $300,000 in savings account pledges is raised. Target date for completion is Jan. 1 and, said Belcher, opening of the savings and loan office here would follow soon after.

The pledge campaign now is underway, added Belcher. He said that the money would not be called for until after Jan. 1.

Administration of the association would be by a board of directors and its prime purpose will be to make long-term home loans.
